NEW ATOMIC ENGINE FOR SHIPS—Revolution on the high seas is a fair description of what will happen in the near future if a project to build an atomic power plant for naval ship propulsion is successful. A contract has been let by the U.S. navy and the job is under way. Problem of producing an atomic "fire" without flame has been solved and the question now is how to develop metals able to resist atomic reaction, corrosion and intense temperature. Ships of the future may look like the artist's conception above.
