AS I SEE IT

mediately without waiting for re-unification of all the old Germany.

In such a union Germany would be an asset—and a menace to none. There would be no cause for any suspicion or fear between France and Germany.

What then prevents us from having such a union? Surely it is not Russia—because Russia has no power to prevent the formation of such an entity. It is mainly because the United States government has not yet faced the realities, as has our own Canadian ministry.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Discovering End Play Makes Player Tingle

In her delightful book, "All the Tricks," Helen Sobel tells how she first discovered the end-play and how it made her tingle with self-appreciation.

I am sure she described an event which all experienced players have enjoyed. This thrill recently came to Mr. New, the avid kibitzer. He had previously "made" many such plays from the sidelines (where he could see all four hands), but this was the first one in actual play.

Mr. Champion hates for Mr. New to put in the first no trump bid when he is his partner. He wants to play the no trump contracts himself. I suspect that his jump to six no trump in today's deal was made partly for the purpose of teaching Mr. New a lesson.

THREE WINNERS

Mr. Abel led the four of hearts and Mr. New won with the ace in dummy. He quickly cashed his three top spades, hoping the suit would break and thus provide four winners. He was sadly disappointed when Mr. Muzzy showed out on the third lead of spades and particularly when Mr. Muzzy's discard was the eight of clubs, apparently indicating possession of the king of that suit.

Checking up Mr. New counted three winners in spades, three in hearts and four in diamonds. That made ten and the ace of clubs would make eleven. It appeared to him that a successful finesse of the queen of clubs was his only chance. Postponing the fateful moment as long as possible, he cashed two more heart tricks and on the last one saw Mr. Muzzy complete his club echo by playing the deuce of that suit.

CHILD'S PLAY

Next he cashed four diamond tricks and then the club play was at hand. He led the four of clubs and Mr. Abel played the trey. Only did Mr. New realize his possibilities. Mr. Muzzy had already shown out of spades and hearts. Nobody at the table had any diamonds left. Therefore Mr. Muzzy had nothing left but clubs. So instead of playing dummy's queen, Mr. New put in the nine. Mr. Muzzy won with the ten but had to return a club into the dummy's ace-queen.

Mr. New beamed. His pleasure was not diminished by Mr. Champion's typical remark that a child would have made the same play. In fact, he claimed that he had planned the whole thing from the start.
