NO DECISION REACHED

Baseball Continuity In City Meeting Aim

A move to form a commission to co-relate all baseball in the city was broached last night at the Civic Centre at a meeting of representatives of all three ball leagues in Prince Rupert.

Also attending were Alan C. Hare, the provincial probation officer and Robert Eby, chairman of the commissioners of the Prince Rupert Parks Board.

Aim of the proposed commission would be to co-ordinate all city baseball to the available playing space as well as attempt to provide a continuity of play for boys from Little League age to senior baseball status.

GAP NOT BRIDGED

Under current conditions, Harold Thom, Pony League president said, a boy graduated from Little League to Pony League, but there was no league to bridge the gap between Pony league and the senior circuit.

"We could form a Babe Ruth League to absorb the players coming out of Pony League, but at present, there isn't a likelihood of being able to get the men or the money to run it or the available space to play," Mr. Thom said.

He suggested that Little League drop the eight-year-old players and advance a year to include 13-year-olds leaving the Pony League to handle the 14 to 16 year olds.

In Prince Rupert's official Little League boys eight to 12, years old are eligible, and under the unofficial Pony League, boys 13 to 15 are admissable.

Pony League coaches Don Scherk and Joe Giordano established that players due to leave that league the end of this season, because of age, were not ready to enter senior ball ranks.

MISS BEST CHANCE

Players missing competitive play at that stage of their baseball career would miss their best chance to develop into ballplayers, the coaches agreed.

Only way in which Little League could alter its age groups was to give up its franchise, which Jim Foster, president of that league, indicated was a retrogressive step, not likely to meet with a great deal of enthusiasm in Little League circles.

Mr. Thom pointed out that formation of a governing body for baseball would strengthen that sports' position with the Parks Board and the city and at the same time provide a ruling body which would speak uniformly for all ball leagues.

LOOKED FOR GUIDANCE

He said that the younger players looked to the older ones for guidance.

"While I'm not condoning or condemning the seniors, some of their actions are not a good example," the Pony league president said. He added that it was to the advantage of Little League, in this regard, to have a strong governing body to ensure that a proper example was set by older players.

If there had to be a gap in a boy's baseball career, probation officer Hare said, it would be more harmful if it occurred when he was 13, rather than 16 or 17.

While baseball was not the complete answer to any delinquency problem the city might have, Mr. Hare pointed out, he would like to see the leagues pick up in July and August, when other youth organizations left off for the summer.

Bob Eby said the Parks Board would like to see an over-all commission formed because the board could use the advice of sportsmen in assisting them on technical problems. He told the group that the board intended to complete the section of Algoma Park behind the present Little League backstop this spring, providing a playing surface of approximately 300 by 350 feet. The present Little League playing area would then undergo land-fill to bring it up to the proper elevation.

Both senior and Pony League representatives indicated that they would be in favor of having a representative serve on an over-all baseball commission. Mr. Foster agreed to bring both the question of a commission and league continuity to the attention of a Little League meeting, scheduled for the end of this month.

Royal Canadian Navy (Reserve)

Part of a great team

The Navy is proud of its women sailors. In every naval division across Canada the Wrens are training one night a week, side by side with the men, to be ready in the event of mobilization.

During your two weeks summer training period, you may go to the Atlantic or Pacific coasts for advanced and specialist training in such branches as Radar, Seaward Defence, Communications, Supply, Electrical and Air Maintenance.

The attractive Wren uniforms are tailored to measure. Complete summer and winter uniforms are issued on enrolment in the RCN (Reserve).
