CAMP

Because of the rain, all the boys slept in Monday morning till 9. The duty patrol, the Hawks, prepared breakfast.

The boys practiced trail signs and tracking until lunch time, following which they broke camp in time to catch the ferry home at 3:30. A Navy cutter and tug were made available to the boys to take their equipment back to town.

As a result of the competition held throughout the camp, the Oolichan patrol under Robin Cameron, won the camp trophy, a most attractive shield. The Oolichans were only two points ahead of the runners-up, the Hurons. Each member of the Oolichan patrol was awarded an individual prize of a compass.

The members of the Oolichan patrol, under Robin Cameron, were: Gary Ogilvie, Ken Cameron, Reid Nelson, Charles Armstrong, Pete Sampson, Michael Bartlett, John Scuby and Thomas Lindstrom.

The members of the runner-up Huron patrol, under leader Jerry Jensen, were: Michael Wayman, John Marchant, Glen Roald, Richard Reekie, Alan Caine, Gerald Maki, Ron Martonson and Raymond Rudolph.

Members of the Sea Hawks, under Jack Rudolph were: Don Murray, Ken Murray, Ron Quick, Maurice Fleming, Wayne Watmough, Ron Dolphin, Jim Logan, Rene Summers and Don Patrick.

The Hawks, under Gregory McLeod, consisted of Don Grantham, Peter Pierce, Norman Munro, Bruce Johnstone, Bob Gordon and Bill Bowie.

SCORES DECISION

DETROIT (AP)— Johnny Summerlin, 24-year-old Detroit heavyweight, used a strong start and a furious finish Wednesday night to take a unanimous 10-round decision over seventh-ranked Harold Carter.

The favored Summerlin, who weighed 194¾, was the stronger puncher and built up an early margin to coast to the victory. Ranked fifth in the division, it was his 30th win against four losses and two draws.

By WILL HANKINSON

ENUNCIATION

Some weeks ago, we discussed voice production. Later, we defined enunciation as the production of the voice. What is now to be said further?

It is not enough merely to produce the voice mechanically well. It is further necessary to clothe that voice with human and dramatic qualities.

There are three principal variable factors in producing the voice:

1. Melody is to speech what it is to singing. Can you imagine enjoying a song recital in which everything was sung on one note of the scale? True, there is at least one song extant which is written all on one note, but ordinarily we are attracted to a song if it has a nice "tune". So also in speech. In speaking, the voice should vary up and down the scale as it does in singing a pleasant melody.

2. Dynamics, as the word suggests, is the power factor of speech and refers to variations in intensity or volume. It is the principal factor in portraying emotion. But whether we shout or whisper or use lesser variations of volume, we are adding interest to our voice production.

3. Pace is two-fold and refers both to the general speed at which one speaks and to variations within the general speed pattern. It is fatal to speak at the wrong speed. If too fast, the audience are unable to follow and give up the struggle. If too slow, they become bored and allow their minds to wander. But once a suitable general speed is determined, it is important to vary that speed continually.

It has been said that "it's the pace that kills." That is especially true in the field of speech. A monotonous pace kills interest. Indeed, interest is destroyed by monotony in any of the variable factors of enunciation. To speak interestingly, then, we must take care to vary our melody, our dynamics, and our pace.

Next week: Business meetings.

WORD STUDY

Enormity: frequently used as a synonym for "enormousness", enormity means basically "exceeding wickedness", "an outrageous act or offense". We speak of the enormity of a hideous crime, not of the enormity of our natural resources.
