But New York Rangers have netted 62 goals so far—tops in the National Hockey League this season — and rank fifth in the six - team standings, one rung above the lowly Boston Bruins. If New York's scoring record hasn't made much of a dent in the team standings, its beginning to show up in the NHL's individual scoring race. 'Official statistics released today list Ranger sharpshooters as the big point-getters last week. Right-winger Andy Bathgate, New York's top scorer, picked up six points with two goals and chalked up five points, while, Dean Prentice and Camille Henty had four each.

BATHGATE MOVES UP Bathgate now has 19 points.

He moved up from a 13th-place Ingarfield and Prentice have Hamilton Tiger-Cats. 16 points and Henry 14.
