considered a major upset. Mrs. Mary Batten, making her first bid in politics, won Humboldt for the Liberals, edging out Mr. Burton and knocking off Joseph Thauberger, Social Credit league president, who lost for a second straight time.

STIFF CONTESTS

The rest of the cabinet went in, but several, including the premier, were given stiff runs by Liberal or Social Credit candidates.

Mr. Douglas, 52-year-old Saskatchewan apostle of socialism for many years, defeated Liberal J. H. Staveley by about 600 votes in Weyburn where the premier had a 1,900-vote majority in 1952.

Liberal leader A. H. (Hammy) McDonald, 37-year-old farmer leading the party in a general election for the first time, won re-election in Moosomin.

Premier Douglas, former Baptist minister, termed the return of the CCF a "vote of confidence." He said the people of Saskatchewan have given the CCF party a mandate to implement its 12-point program for prosperity.

"By their vote," he said in a victory statement at Weyburn, "The electorate have said that they wish us to continue with our resources and industrial development in a manner which will bring a greater measure of security and prosperity to every citizen."

The Social Credit showing, though not the "sweeping victory" Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta and Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia predicted, nonetheless was described by Mr. Bennett as showing that "the Social Credit movement in Saskatchewan is a rising political force."

Each of the Social Credit successes occurred in northern rural ridings—Nipawin, Meadow Lake and Rosthern—all held previously by the Liberals.
