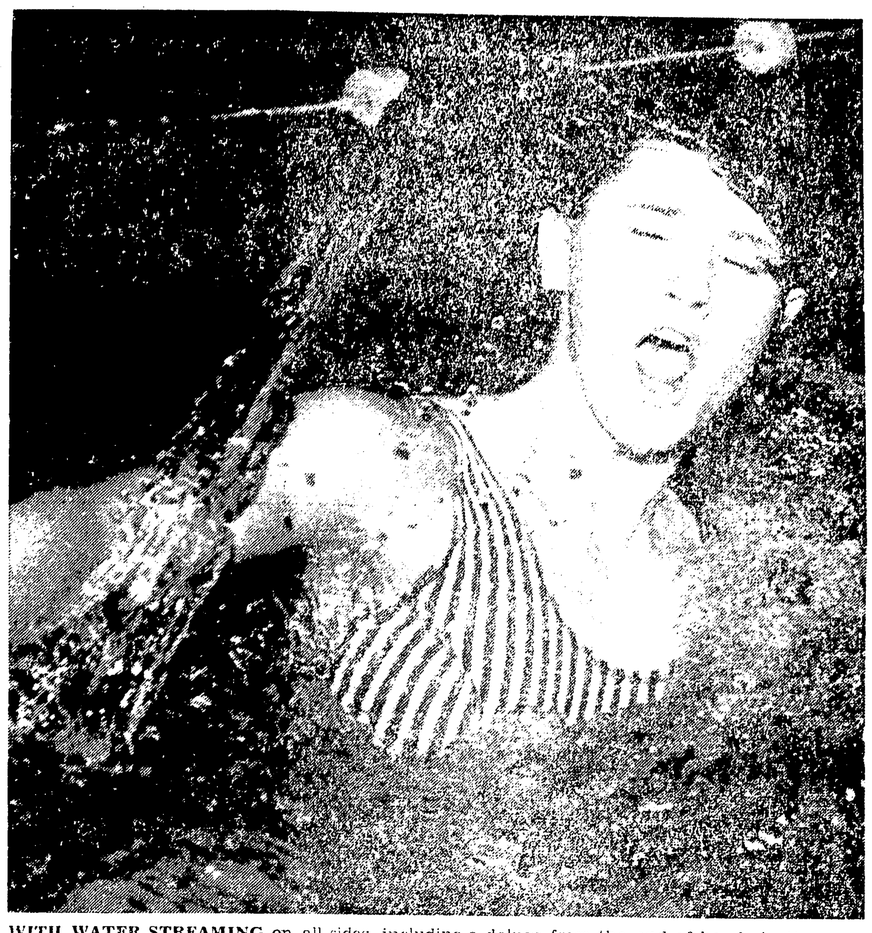
Canadian News in Pictures

PRIME MINISTER DIEFENBAKER says nuclear-armed Bomarc missiles are no longer effective because the day of the manned bomber is coming to an end. The prime minister opened his election campaign with a major policy speech. The United States, he said, had planned 30 to 40 Bomarc bases but now had only six. Question of nuclear arms for Canadian troops abroad would be reviewed at NATO meeting in May. — CP Wriephoto



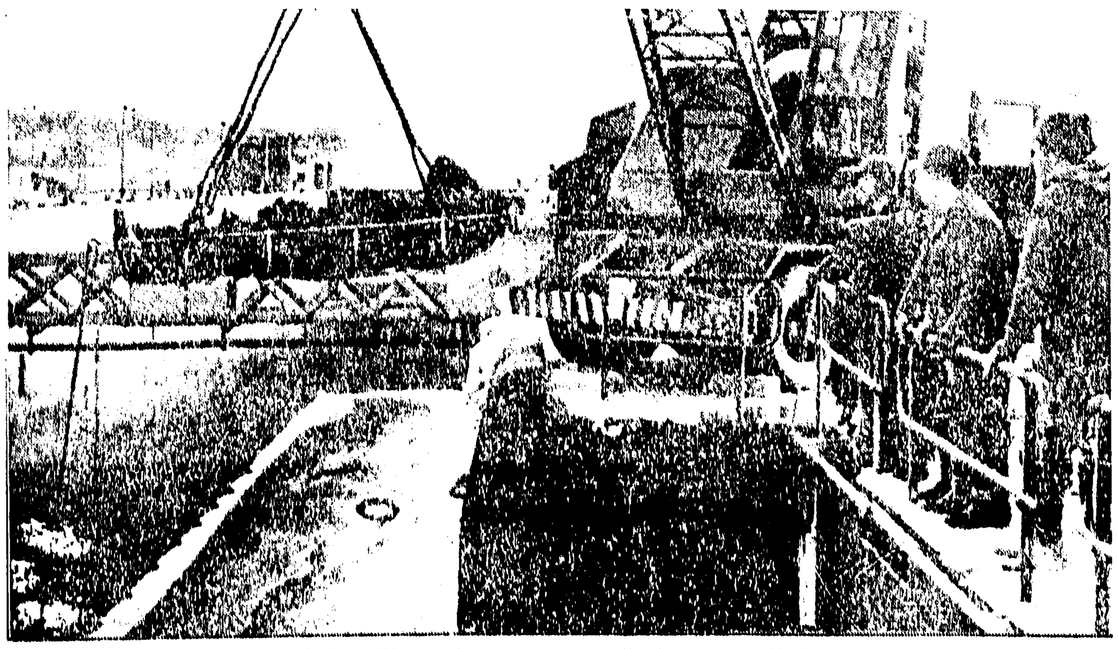
WITH WATER STREAMING on all sides, including a deluge from the end of her hair, 15-year-old Vancouver swimmer Lynne Pomfret makes a turn during one of her races at the Pan-American trials in Vancouver. In all her races, Miss Pomfret was only seconds behind world record holder Mary Stewart. Prince Rupert "water babies" also made an outstanding showing at the Pan-Am trials.
— CP Photo

LIBERAL LEADER Lester Pearson wears a pleased smile during intensive campaigning preparatory to the April 8 federal general election. Mr. Pearson has launched a campaign platform calling for Canadian troops in NORAD and NATO to be equipped with nuclear weapons as soon as possible. Canada should meet her commitments to her allies in NATO and NORAD, he has maintained. Emphasis on greater trade is also given. — CP Wirephoto

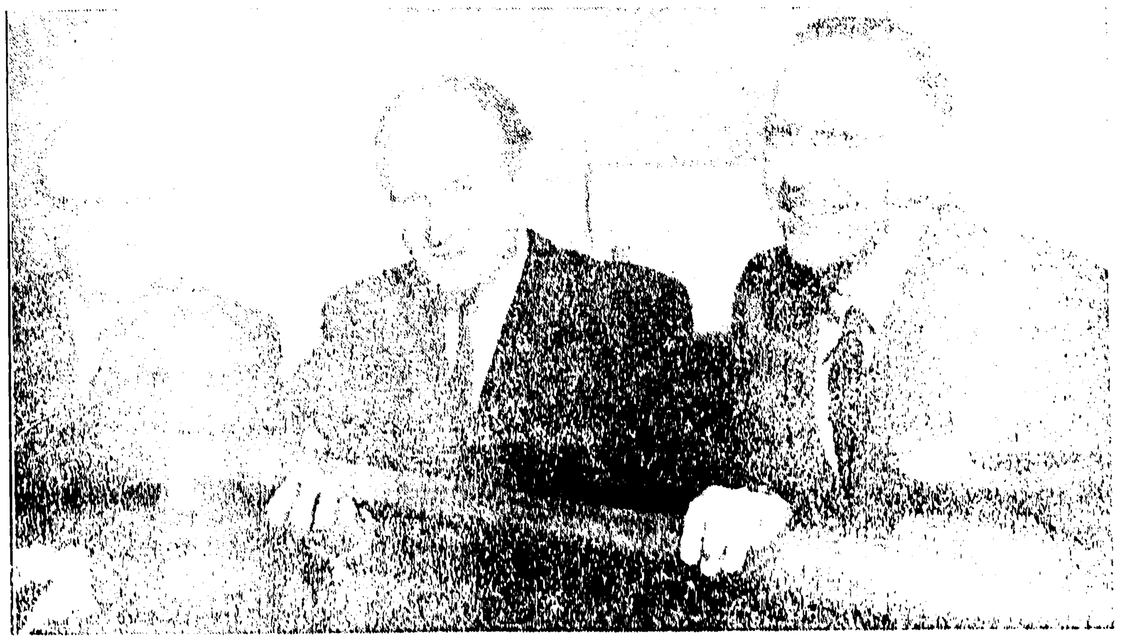
IN PREPARATION for a move to central India Dr. Arnold Carter, his wife and four sons pack books and other possessions into an oil drum at Windsor, Ont. Dr. Carter will take over a 90-bed hospital in India. Boys are James, 9, William, 7, Robert, 10, and Thomas, 12. — SP Photo

PRACTISING what he preaches, Dr. William Andrew Orban, head of University of Saskatchewan's physical education department, takes a two-mile run around the campus four times a week. He is author of 5BX, the RCAF's plan for physical fitness.
— CP Photo

BURIED UNDER 100 pounds of stamps collected by Cubs and Scouts in Vancouver area is Jody Turner of 68th Cub pack. Stamps will be sold to finance Scouting programs for handicapped youngsters throughout the world. Boys in movement throughout Canada, including those in Prince Rupert, are joining in collections.
— CP Photo



IN SPECTACULAR RESCUE, Clifford Paul, 37, of Niagara-on-the Lake, Ont., a St. Lawrence Seaway worker, is hoisted from lock six of Welland Canal at Thorold, Ont. He had been working on a gate about 35 feet above the floor when he suffered a slipped disc in his back. He had to be lowered to the bottom by rope and then hoisted up by the seaway's 50-ton mobile crane.
— CP Wirephoto



CANADA'S CENTENNIAL celebration in 1967 should be a big thing, and for this reason John Fisher, centre, chairman of the National Centennial Council, displays an overhead gavel as the administration holds its first board meeting in Ottawa. With him are Ernest Cote, assistant deputy minister of northern affairs, and right, George C. Nichols, [illegible] — CP Wirephoto