BEACH WARBLER — Radio singer Darlene Zito models a tri-colored elasticized faille swim suit on a Connecticut beach.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Birmingham firemen mailed a 10-year-old girl's letter for her Friday—and wiped her tears away too.

The youngster mistook a fire alarm for a mail box with the usual result—a false alarm.

She was still standing there when four fire trucks carrying 16 firemen roared up.

Battalion chief Howard Jordan helped her mail her letter in the proper box—across the street.

Mines Past, Future For Stewart People

ingenious plans have been advanced for shipping the ore out, including construction of a mono-rail oevrhead tramline.

However, Mayor Tommy Palmer of Stewart is convinced it will be done by means of a shaft driven 2,400 feet through ice and rock and then extended 12 miles to a suitable outlet for delivery. He claims to know exactly where the outlet will be but is not giving the secret away.

CORRIDORS OPPOSED

That was part of the story of Stewart the visitors learned on their trip. At a board of trade dinner at which W. R. Tooth was chairman, they learned of Stewart's hopes as a port when it is connected by road to Cassiar. Mr. Tooth also told of the town's opposition to the establishment of Canadian corridors through Alaska, a move which the townspeople feel would rob Stewart of its natural right to handle traffic to and from the interior.

For the visitors, associated boards of trade president Duncan Kerr explained that the same position had been taken by his organization. He also spoke of the association's interest in seeing early construction of the Cassiar-Stewart road.

WRONG DONKEYS

From businessman Tom Wallace, the guests heard how he started logging operations which have added something new to Stewart's industry. They also heard how he happened to have two lonely-looking donkeys on his property.

"I wired south for two donkeys, meaning bulldozers," he explained. "But someone goofed at the other end and I got the real animal instead."

The visitors saw the crumbling old hut of Happy Joe the Trader who has been there longer than anyone can remember. Happy Joe appears once every summer on a big celebration, for which only he knows the reason.

ON FOURTH FORTUNE

They also saw the bright lights of little Hydar, Alaska, just across the border. These burn all night, particularly at the bar of Dago Marie. Marie, who seems to know more than anyone about the mines in that vicinity, is said to have been through three fortunes and to be now on her fourth.

The old days of the dancing girls in these frontier towns are gone, but the melody lingers on, just as it does for the forgotten prospectors and promoters who once made the place burst with hopes which then burst, too.

A new note is being heard, however, and it is a stirring one. It is the note of confidence heard in men's voices as they speak of a future which is based on a value that has been assessed and found good.
