Ex-Commie Fired

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP) — The school committee Wednesday fired teacher Miss Anne Hale Jr., an admitted former Communist who claims descent from pilgrim John Alden. The 46-year-old Miss Hale, suspended last spring, was charged with being unfit to teach, conduct unbecoming a school teacher and membership in the Communist party.

United States Has Upper Hand in Weather Deal If She Wished To Cause Rain, Drought in Russia

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may some day be possible to cause torrents of rain over Russia by seeding clouds moving toward the Soviet Union.

Or it may be possible—if an opposite effect is desired—to cause destructive droughts which would dry up food crops by "over-seding" those same clouds.

And fortunately for the United States, Russia could do little to retaliate because most weather moves from west to east.

The possibility such a spectacular device as this might be used in some future total war "should not be discounted," according to the man who heads a group set up by the U.S. Congress to advise it on the chances for success of plans to control the weather.

Naval Capt. Howard Orville, who charted the weather for Doolittle's raid on Tokyo and helped prepare the forecasts for the North African and Normandy invasions, is chairman of an 11-member advisory committee charged by Congress with seeing that current efforts at rain making and rain suppression don't get out of hand.

It is Orville's personal view that if the United States would devote the same effort and money to weather experiments that it does to atomic development it could, in about 40 years, "increase precipitation over any area almost at will, using favorable situations."

However, he emphasized that the advisory committee does not take it for granted weather control will or will not work.

Primarily, Congress wants the committee to determine whether experiments, public and private, strengthen possibilities of large-scale weather control.

The weather bureau has been conducting extensive cloud-seeding tests in the Seattle area. Meteorologists Ferguson Hall, the man in charge, says results still are being evaluated. He adds, however, that as of now he does not think weather control on any kind of worthwhile scale will be worked out.

This opinion is echoed by one of the senior scientists in the bureau, Dr. Harry Wexler, who maintains that if rainfall increases claimed by commercial rain making firms were real "they would stand out like a sore thumb—and such has not been revealed, at least in the cases we have studied."

The committee is seeking information from more than a dozen foreign countries where control projects have been carried out. One Australian scientist, Dr. E. G. Bowen, maintains he has tapped individual clouds for rainfalls ranging up to 1½ inches.

Watch for a Chance to Confuse Opponents

Thought for today: In a game against players who are better than you are, don't just sit there thoughtlessly and hopelessly following suit, blindly believing your superior oppents can't make a mistake.

Granted, they may outmaneuver you on straight bidding and play, but that makes it all the more desirable for you to jazz up the play a little, as they say around the tournaments. Be alert for opportunities to put them on the wrong track. Remember, the best players in the world can't see through the backs of the cards.

treat Mr. Champion in today's deal. He opened the three of spades and Mr. Meek put up the ten. Believing that a heart switch might prove embarrassing, Mr. Champion won this trick with the king and led a club.

SITUATION GRAVE

Now it was clear to Mr. Dale that the situation was grave. A return of dummy's jack of clubs would undoubtedly give Mr. Champion six tricks in the suit. Even if the ace or king were played from the board, the queen would drop on the second lead. So, without hesitation, Mr. Dale played the queen at trick two. Mr. Champion made a few choice remarks about his luck. If the queen were a singleton, then Mr. Meek had the suit stopped with four to the ten. And with no entry to dummy outside of clubs, Mr. Champion decided to make sure of five tricks in the suit.

After all, he had two other chances for nine tricks—a successful heart finesse or finding the ace of diamonds on his right. If the queen of clubs was permitted to win.

UNS CLUBS

Mr. Dale led another spade and Mr. Champion ducked. He was forced to win the next spade and then he ran the clubs. On the third and fourth clubs Mr. Dale signaled vigorously with the nine and deuce of diamonds. On the last two clubs he casually dropped the deuce, then the eight of hearts.

With everybody down to four cards, Mr. Champion had A-Q of hearts and K-Q of diamonds. Mr. Dale had the ace of diamonds, the lone king of hearts and two good spades. Mr. Meek held three hearts and the jack of diamonds.

Mr. Champion is good but he had no way of knowing the right play. He finessed the queen of hearts—and Mr. Dale took the last four tricks.
