BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

The "Killing" Play Sets Contract Two

Most of the time bridge writers give you hands that are bid to game or slam. That is because there is usually more drama in higher contracts than in mere part-score deals. However, many beautiful plays are made on the "little" hands.

After passing up one chance to defeat today's contract of three spades, Mr. Dale came through with a fine, thoughtful defensive play.

Mr. Abel opened the five of clubs and dummy's ace won. Mrs. Keen then led the lone heart from the board and put in the jack when Mr. Dale played low. Mr. Abel won with the ace and returned the queen of clubs.

QUEEN FALLS

Mrs. Keen ruffed this trick, led a small heart and ruffed it, noting the fall of the queen on her right. She led a spade from dummy and Mr. Dale elected to play low. He was not yet sure of Mrs. Keen's exact distribution and he did not want to shut out the possibility of his partner winning a trick with the queen of trumps—maybe the lone queen of trumps.

Mrs. Keen won the fifth trick with the ten of spades, led another small heart and ruffed it with dummy's last trump. This is where Mr. Dale made the killing defensive play. He could have overruffed with the nine of spades and, in fact, it was very tempting to do so.

But he bravely abstained, discarding a club. If he had overruffed, Mrs. Keen could have made her nine tricks. She could have ruffed the probable club return, driven out the last of the opposing trumps with a spade lead and had a trump left to regain the lead and cash her good hearts.

But, as Mr. Dale suspected, she was faced with a serious problem in getting back to her hand when he refused to overruff. Whatever she led from the board was going to deplete her already dwindling trump supply past the breaking point. She led a club and ruffed it with the jack of spades.

Next came the king of hearts and this time Mr. Dale ruffed with the nine of spades. He returned a high club and when Mrs. Keen ruffed this she had only one trump left. If she now led a trump Mr. Dale would win and the defenders would take three diamond tricks.

She led another good heart and Mr. Abel stepped in with the ace of trumps. Suspecting the true situation, Mr. Abel underled his ace of diamonds, on the theory that Mr. Dale could not have bid as he did without the king of that suit.

Mr. Dale won with the jack of diamonds, cashed his ace of spades and the defenders got another diamond trick for a two-trick set.

First Half Celco League Ends Friday

Bowling in the Celco City bowling league will come to a halt for this year on Friday and Celco keglers will not take to the alleys again until January 5 when the second half of the season gets underway, it was announced this week.

Tomorrow night's bowling will also take the form of a "turkey shoot" with the keglers posting women's and men's high single, plus one "hidden score" receiving turkeys. Bowlers must have at least six league games behind them to qualify, a league spokesman said.

In bowling last Friday, Checker Cabs continued to pace the Celco trundlers, chalking up a 3204 high three score for the night that was not shaded by other teams as well as setting a new high single with their 1203 game.

PREVIOUS MARK 1150

The new team mark breaks the cabbies' own previous top single game score of 1150 set October 28.

The cab team's Russ McNeil continued also to lead the men bowlers turning in both men's high single and three scores of a 201 game and a 608 three-game total.

For the women's laurels, Ben McChesney of Savoy took women's high single with a 201 game while Mac J. LaPorte of Co-Op won women's high three with 610.

Standings: Checker Cabs 26, Co-Op 24, Bulgers 23, Savoy 22, RCMP 18, Hurricanes 18, Neal Evans 17, Bin Hitters 15.

Police Recover Famous Jewels

JOHANNESBURG (AP) Detectives surprised two men in a luxurious hotel room here Wednesday night and seized a cardboard box containing the stolen Oppenheimer jewels — worth more than $500,000.

Police and insurance investigators acted swiftly on a tip-off to recover "98 per cent" of the collection stolen from a wall safe at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oppenheimer 10 days ago. The two men were arrested.

Arrest of a third man was announced today. No details were given.

When the detectives opened the box, it spilled out matchless pink, yellow and blue diamond necklaces, bracelets and rings, and valuable emeralds, sapphires and pearls in exquisite settings. A reward of £15,000 had been offered.

Police believed that thieves used a key to slip into the home of Mrs. Oppenheimer while she was dining at the home of her father-in-law, Sir Ernest Oppenheimer, multi-millionaire South African gold and diamond magnate.
