LONDON (—Lady Strathcona, chairman of a ball at a London hotel, showed guests what she called the "Family Nail," a large diamond brooch with a small iron nail in the middle. She said it was the "original last nail" driven in the Canadian Pacific Railway by the first Lord Strathcona. It now is a family heirloom.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Fewer and Better Bids Will Help Win Contracts

It takes more than technically correct bidding and play to make a winning bridge player. You are not only trying to outbid and outplay your opponents, but you are also trying to outmaneuver and out-think them.

Often the situation will come up where you have two bids available, neither of which could possibly be criticized as to technical correctness. However, one will be a losing bid and the other will be a winning one. Obviously, the ability to choose the "right" bid in these cases will increase your winning percentage.

TWO HEARTS

In today's deal, if Mr. Dale had bid two hearts instead of five clubs on the second round, would you have said it was a wrong bid? It might be described as a beautiful slam try. If Mr. Abel's hand happened to be S—9 8 2; H—K 2; D—Q J 4; C—J 8 7 4 2, the small slam would be practically ice-cold. And note that this hand is very close to what Mr. Abel actually had. It is the same distribution (5-3-3-2) and has the same high card content.

But a bid can be too delicate If Mr. Dale had bid two hearts he might well have lost the opportunity of playing five clubs. The opponents might have played five spades and made it. Or Mr. Dale might have gambled on six clubs over the five spade bid and been set a trick.

WHY TO FIVE

Why did he jump to five clubs on the second round of bidding? Why not take the time to describe his hand fully and to sound out slam possibilities?

The answer is that the old boy wondered who had all the spades. Mr. Meek had passed on the first round but since that time he had acquired several important pieces of information. His left-hand opponent, Mr. Abel, had shown a weakish hand by giving his partner a single raise in clubs, and Mr. Champion had shown a good hand by coming in, vulnerable, at the two level.

Mr. Dale was willing to wager that if he bid two hearts, the opponents would find a good spot in spades. Well, if they wanted to bid spades, they would have to come in at the five range. This they were unwilling to do.

I often hear Mr. Dale say. "A lot of players would be better off if they made fewer bids—and better ones." He's right.

South dealer. Both sides vulnerable.
