Pearson To Head Canadian Group

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson will head Canada's delegation to the United Nations General Assembly which opens Nov. 12 in New York.

Other delegation members will be State Secretary Pinard; Lucien Cardin, Liberal MP for Richelieu-Vercheres; Liberal Senator David Croll of Toronto; and R. A. MacKay, Canada's permanent representative to the UN.

The delegation's five alternate representatives include F. A. Seward, associate dean of the University of British Columbia's faculty of graduate studies.

PUTTING THE finishing touches to her masterpiece, Mrs. Marguerite Bourlurut of Nice, France, threads her way to completion of the embroidered portrait of Queen Elizabeth. The embroidered picture, representing long hours of tedious work on the part of Mrs. Bourlurut, will be presented to the Queen during her royal visit to France in the spring of 1957.

Remote Airfields Seen Only Solution To Noise

OTTAWA (CP)— Canada's new CF-105 supersonic jet fighters will make so much noise it may be necessary to operate them from remote airfields, says a Canadian aircraft engineer.

Writing in the current issue of Canadian Aeronautical Journal, G. R. Gibson, flight test engineer with Avro Aircraft Ltd., Malton, Ont., says the noise generated by the CF-105 may bring strong complaints or even vigorous legal action from persons living near the airfields where they are based.

He says: "There is no method at present available which will reduce aircraft taxiing and take-off noise to any great extent."

"The answer to this problem seems to be for an arrangement to operate all aircraft which cause noise annoyance from some remotely located airdrome . . ."

20,000-POUND THRUST

The jet engine for the CF-105 being developed by Avro has a design thrust of more than 20,000 pounds. It is understood that the first CF-105s accepted by the RCAF will be based at Uplands, a civilian field on Ottawa's outskirts.

As far as aircraft maintenance workers are concerned, Mr. Gibson says the noise output of jet engines has reached "dangerous" levels. The scream of a jet engine can surpass the noise of thunder. Mr. Gibson says persons subjected to it for a period of time can suffer, among other things, damage to body tissues, interference with the senses and long-term cumulative impairment of brain functions.

New Markets Opening Up Exporters Told

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que. (CP)—With major new supplies of iron ore, petroleum and gas now available, Canada will have a new surge of industrial expansion, Marshall E. Young of St. Louis, Mo., predicted in an address to the Canadian Exporters' Association.

Mr. Young, who is vice-president of Monsanto Chemical Co., said this would mean "new competition among yourselves" for mass markets at home and abroad, and need for bigger overseas market.

Now was the time to go after those markets, and to get the area - knowledge and product-prestige which would be needed if Canada were to manufacture abroad—as would probably happen as she developed into a creditor country.

Mr. Young predicted trouble for those who attempted to enter markets abroad without a careful market survey of local tastes and customs, and a careful look at competition.

Generally, customers and prospects were pretty much alike whether they were in Latin America, the East or Europe.

"They want," he said, "to know something of your ability to serve their needs and how your products or services can help them with their problems."

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Lead Remains In Dummy For A Third Finesse

By the dynamic Point Count method, Mr. Masters had six playing tricks at spades. A hand of this strength is too good for a simple overcall. It is worth a takeout double, followed by a suit bid on the next round.

Mr. Champion had fairly good values after the takeout double, but only enough to respond with a two diamond bid and await further developments. However, after his partner's two spade bid, he could count on him for six tricks. In Dynamic Point Count, three points are equal to one trick.

The bidding:

Pass	4 ♠	All Pass

Mr. Champion had nine useful points in high cards and his fit in the spade suit provided the one additional point needed for another bid. He bid three spades and Mr. Masters, whose values slightly exceeded those shown by his previous bid, carried on to game.

The opening lead was the four of hearts and Mrs. Keen won with the queen, cashed the king and continued with the ace. Mr. Masters ruffed the third heart and cashed the ace and king of clubs.

Now he crossed to the dummy with the ace of diamonds, led the queen of clubs and got rid of a small diamond from his hand.

It was now time to get into the trump suit and take the finesse against the king. The trump set-up in this hand represents a trap for the unwary declarer. Mr. Masters had to be careful to lead exactly the right trump from dummy at trick eight. If he led the queen Mrs. Keen would play low and the queen would win. On the next spade lead, however, Mr. Masters would have to win in his hand as he would be down to A J 10. With no more entries to the board, he would have to lose a trick to the king of trumps and a diamond trick to Mr. Abel.

But of course Mr. Masters did not lead the queen of spades from dummy at the eighth trick. He led the nine of spades. Mrs. Keen had nothing to gain by covering and the nine held the trick. Next came the queen of spades and again Mrs. Keen did not cover. But by this play the lead remained in dummy for a third finesse against the king to assure the success of the contract.

IT'S JAM PACKED!

"Oh, I don't know Jim—I see lots of empty seats."

"That's a laugh! I wasn't thinking of the Stadium. I meant the NEW Star Weekly."

"Yeah—I'm looking forward to getting a copy—just what did you mean by Jam packed?"

"Well you know it's going to be completely new in a compact tabloid form—pages ten and a half by fourteen inches and that means the magazine section too."

"I understand it is really going to be a marvellous assembly of pictures and articles and stories.

"I just can't wait till October 29th for it. It'll be some exciting game—I mean paper. Now here come the players."

The NEW! NEW! NEW! Star Weekly.

LONDON (Reuters)—The Soviet Union has sharply reduced its jamming of British Broadcasting Corporation programs aimed at Russia, the BBC has announced.

The BBC in its handbook for 1957 said the reduction in interference was noted after Russian leaders Nikola Bulganin and Nikita Khrushchev visited Britain last April.
