Cheery Welcome Awaits West German Visitors

This story is another in a series giving the impressions gained by a Canadian reporter during a two-week tour of Germany.

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadians travelling to West Germany find a minimum of immigration and customs formalities — no more than in travelling to and from the United States.

Starting my visit, I landed at Dusseldorf airport expecting a detailed quizzing, a thorough search of baggage and perhaps a gentle frisking.

Here's what happened: A cursory glance at the passport. How much money? How many cigarets? Your own personal things in the bag? Thank you. It was all over in a few seconds.

The bag wasn't opened. It was the same on leaving West Germany.

FEW DIFFICULTIES

Except for infrequent difficulties because of the luggage problem, a visitor can travel about the country without worry. A smattering of German helps and so does sign language, but usually someone handy speaks English.

A virtual blank on English was encountered with most owners of small shops, and about half the taxi drivers and railway porters. In a large department store in Bonn, a salesman-interpreter was called. School children study English. A pint-sized elevator boy of about 14 in a Berlin hotel prided himself on the English phrases and expressions he knew.

I found politeness and courtesy everywhere.

One train conductor must have noticed my bewilderment at a large station where a change of trains had to be made.

"I guess you speak English, eh?" he said, smiling. Then he said in English that might be heard in Winnipeg or Chicago, Saint John or Detroit: "just go down those stairs and up the next ones to the left to platform 2. Your train will be there in four minutes."

FACTORIES BUSY

If a visitor expects to find West Germany busy he isn't wrong. Smoke rolls from the chimneys of giant factories through the Ruhr valley, 10 years ago a prime target for allied airmen.

People throng city streets. Traffic is heavy, but not of the volume and semi-frenzy of downtown London or New York.

Stores present tasteful and well-decorated windows, the display immaculate and gleaming. There seems no lack of essentials or luxuries.

One gets the impression, however, that the proportion of window-shopping to potential inside-the-store customers is greater than in Canada. Many people gaze wistfully at the displays and move on, only to stop at the next store window.

A Canadian visitor finds himsef over-tipping at first if he doesn't know that hotels and restaurants add a 10-per-cent service charge to his bill. Similarly, for other services rating a 25-cent tip at home, the equivalent one mark is too much.

Food is plentiful. By Canadian standards it often seems cheap, as do some articles in stores, but this is not necessarily true on the basis of German earnings.

FRENCH CAPITAL

Paris was the site of a tribal settlement of Gauls before the Roman occupaion in the 1st century BC.

"BATHING" BEAUTY — Ann Pease seems to be one of those girls who like to keep their suits dry when they go swimming. But customers at a Miami Beach pool where she's relaxing didn't register any complaints. It's nice just having her around.

SPECIAL AWARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of British Columbia's annual "great trekker" award for 1954 will go to Vancouver housewife Mrs. Frank Ross, former chief research economist for the Canadian tariff board. The award goes to a graduate who has made a special contribution to the community, and commemorates the "great trek" of 1912 when the university was moved about five miles to its present site on Point Grey.

DIFFERENT TEA

A product of Paraguay is yerba mate, or Paraguay tea, which is consumed all over South America.
