BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Time Out To Think May Save A Doomed Game

Old Mr. Dale believes in making attacking leads against slams. His lead of the five of clubs in today's hand didn't work out so well. In fact, it was almost fatal to his side's chances of defeating the contract.

Leading into declarer's tenace holdings is not the best way to pick up tricks and yet Mrs. Keen did that very thing later in the hand. Her play effectively killed Mr. Abel's chances.

The queen of clubs won the first trick and a small heart was led to dummy's king. Here Mr. Abel got the bad news about the trump suit when Mrs. Keen discarded a club. He led the queen of diamonds from the board and Mrs. Keen went in with the ace.

However, she did not woodenly return a club. Mr. Abel could have won a club return with the ace, picked up all of Mr. Dale's trumps and cashed the king and jack of diamonds. Dummy's three high spades would have taken the last three tricks.

TIME TO THINK

After winning with the ace of diamonds, Mrs. Keen took time out to think—a highly recommended and sometimes neglected practice. She reasoned that her partner surely had more hearts than dummy.

If he didn't, then Mr. Abel had a seven card heart suit and in that case he certainly would not have seen fit to bid three no trump on the third round of bidding.

She then turned her attention to the spade suit. She could see 11 spades in her hand and dummy. If Mr. Dale had none, he could ruff a spade return for the setting trick. If he had one, then Mr. Abel's transportation to the board in everything except the trump suit itself.

So Mrs. Keen returned a spade and the contract was doomed.

If Mr. Abel tried to take discards on the spades at this point, Mr. Dale would ruff. If he picked up all of the outstanding trumps he would have no way to get back to the board.
