Pat Gordon as the tragically thwarted Florence, Keith Faught as Hannibal the would-be musician, Joy Reed as Fairy May, the "plain Jane," Pat Bolton as Jeffrey, the war victim and Georgiana McNay as the sullen Mrs. Paddy turned in first-rate characterizations, leaving the audience to wonder if, perhaps, things weren't really better "on the inside."

The stage setting was well done and the lighting, while a trifle dim, helped create the correct atmosphere of unreality.

Stage manager was Roy Wicks, while others behind the scenes were Bob Hill, Robin Bird, Noreen Renshaw, Gayle Leeman, Jim Cumming, Dave Yule, Helen Kontratiuk and Bob Irving, stage hands; Verna Faught, Nina Youngman, Bernice Woodside and Gerry Woodside, make-up; Jim Cumming, lights.

Ushers at the Civic Centre were members of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion.

Publicity was handled by John Robertson and promotion by Ruth Foster.

The play will be presented for its final performance tonight, with curtain time at 8:30 p.m. —GOBA.

Corned Beef Spices Spaghetti. For a new version of spaghetti (the kind from cans), spice it off with corned beef. Pour 1 can of spaghetti with tomato sauce into a pan. Add 1 cup chopped corned beef. The corned beef can be the canned kind . . . use about half of one of the 12 ounce cans. Season it if you like with a teaspoon of horseradish or some prepared mustard. Arrange the spaghetti on a platter with broccoli at each end. Pass hot French bread to go with it. This whole meal is a breeze to fix, a pleasure to eat.

Cook Sauerbraten Simple Way. International celebrity among foods is sharp-sweet beef Sauerbraten. You can stir it up in your own kitchen with hardly any effort, thanks to today's handy grocery specialties. Start with a can of rich, brown beef gravy and 4 minute steaks (1 package frozen steaks). Proceed like so: brown steaks and a small sliced onion in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine until steaks can be easily pulled apart and onion is tender. Add 1 can of beef gravy (1½ cups) 2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar, 6 crumbled gingersnaps, and ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer together, stirring occasionally, until sauce is thickened. This makes 4 grand-tasting servings.
