Water Colors, Drawings On View For Two Days

Due to demands of those who have already seen Prince Rupert Art Club's present exhibition at Booth Memorial High school, the exhibition will be open to the public for an extra afternoon this week.

The club originally scheduled the exhibition for Friday afternoon and evening.

Now the exhibition can be seen on Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5:30 p.m. Friday times are from 2 to 5:30 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m.

The exhibition features about 40 pen and ink drawings by the late C. W. Jefferys, long recognized as the outstanding painter of historical incidents in Canada. Also on display are a collection of 117 English original water colors which are having their British Columbia preview here. The only other B.C. city to exhibit these water colors will be Vancouver in February.

Jefferys' drawings demonstrate the concern he had for historical truth. Western Canadians will appreciate his works dealing with the incidents that led to the settlement of the North West Territories.

The Art Club is indebted to the Imperial Oil Company who purchased the drawings in an effort to keep intact this historical record and are now making them available to the public.
