cancer CINCINNATI (A) — The long wait ends tonight for big Jim Umbricht whose pitching career was in jeopardy because of cancer. He will be in the bullpen New York for Houston Colts against Cincinnati Reds.

The tall right-hander from the University of Georgia underwent a seven-hour operation March 7 to remove a malignant growth from his right leg and groin. Doctors said that under similar circumstances five years ogo Umbricht's leg would have been amputated.

Umbricht, 32, says he feels fine, anxious to get back to pitching.
