Professional Engineers Hear Officers From Vancouver

Two officers of the Association of Professional Engineers of British Columbia paid a courtesy visit to the Prince Rupert branch of the association last night speaking at a meeting of the branch.

The visitors are J. A. Merchant P. Eng., registrar, and R. M. Williams, public relations director, both of Vancouver.

Mr. Merchant addressed the local group on recent activities of the B.C. association and answered queries on various aspects of the association's work while Mr. Williams spoke briefly on public relations.

The pair flew to Terrace yesterday from Kitimat, where they had attended a meeting of that branch, and drove into Prince Rupert. They planned to leave for the south today.

Among those attending last night's meeting were members E. Bartlett, president; V. R. B. Williams, vice-president; M. Anderson, R. C. Telford, Ray Cunliffe, R. Gower, H. Haymer, R. Robinson, prospective members E. Messinger, A. Steigleder, A. Mitchell and R. McBride, and a guest, W. C. R. Jones.

Cooks Missing on Good Bet In Ignoring Tasty Eggplant

With so many good vegetables from which to choose it is too bad to keep serving the same ones over and over again. Of course, everyone has favorite vegetbles, but you miss out on very good eating if you never try some of the less familiar ones. Eggplant is a good example. Its sleek, purplish-black appearance attracts you but your admiration may be followed by bewilderment about how to cook it.

If you have hesitated up to now to cook eggplant then you will be glad to hear that the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, sa that it is very easy to do.

Home economists say to choose an eggplant that is firm, glossy and free from blemishes. As for cooking—frying is perhaps the fastest method and the one that is used most often. First pee the eggplant and cut it into half-inch slices, then dip the slices in egg and crumbs and saute them in a small amount of fat until they are tender and golden brown. This takes about 8 minutes. Broiled eggplant is good too, especially if you sprinkle a little grated cheese on it.

An idea for a luncheon dish is to cut the eggplant in half lengthwise, scroop out part of the centre, cut into cubes and use as part of the filling. Then fill the eggplant with a tasty stuffing of either creamed meat or vegetables. Bake it in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for 45 minutes or until tender.

City Sea Cadets Return Home From Comox

A group of sun-tanned and happy city boys returned home aboard the Prince Rupert yesterday, from a two-week camping session in the south.

They are sea cadets of Prince Rupert's Captain Cook Corps who attended camp along with other B.C. cadets at Comox naval training establishment on Vancouver Island.

The boys left here at the end of July for the summer training session and spent a busy two weeks at the Island centre, sailing, swimming, shooting, learning Red Cross water safety and in general putting into practice the theory they learn during winter months at home.

Special events for the youths were cruises on naval ships where they saw their adult counterparts at work.
