ANCIENT RANK

The word sheriff developed from the historic shire-reeves of England, officials of shires or counties.

On the coast of British Columbia, if fire is kept out of the logged areas, the forest will regenerate itself. On a burned area it may be necessary to plant trees.

New Canadians Mark End Of Successful Season

There were no traditional caps and gowns worn, nor any diplomas or scholarships presented, but there was a strong feeling of achievement in the air at Annunciation school hall Friday night when a group of Prince Rupert's New Canadians, their teachers and friends, marked their own "graduation," completion of their first year's studies of the English language and Canadian way of life.

The "English for New Canadians" classes, were held throughout the winter by the Prince Rupert Canadian Citizenship Council of Prince Rupert.

Besides marking the first New Canadians' graduation, the event afforded a preview of next year's hoped for international folk festival, for which the Citizenship Council is already making preliminary plans.

A. E. Boyle, chairman of the Citizenship Council's educational committee and "principal" of the English classes commended those who had turned out during the worst of winter weather to gain knowledge and improve their opportunities to progress in the community, in work and play.

He also commended the teachers, all volunteers, who had attended classes regularly.

Mr. Boyle thanked those responsible for allowing the classes free use of Civil Defence Headquarters, the Armory and Annunciation School hall for classes and he presented a cheque to Father O. P. Mohan, for the use of Annunciation Hall.

Father Mohan, in accepting the cheque, said it would be placed in the fund for the new Catholic hall, in which the classes might be held next season. He offered his congratulations and best wishes for the future success of the classes, saying that "anything which fosters love and charity, and mutual understanding is well worth striving for."

Another highlight of the evening saw Citizenship court proceedings staged for the benefit of newcomers who would soon be seeking citizenship.

W. C. Hankinson, in directing the demonstration, said that many new Canadians feared the court session, feeling there was some disgrace attached in having to "go to court." The demonstration was planned to show that it wasn't so.

The first section of the demonstration showed the applicant, played by Willi Neumann (himself a new Canadian who has not yet received citizenship) going to the office of the clerk of court to make the original application, consisting of filling in a form including details of place of birth and length of residence in Canada.

The application must be posted for three months, after which time the applicant is called to court for examination by County Court judge. Mr. Neumann appeared in "court" and was asked questions, such as: "How long have you been in this country?" "Can you read and write English?" "Do you approve of Canada's method of government?" "Were you ever a Communist?" Character witnesses were then called, asked simple questions and the session was completed.

The final section of the administration showed the actual granting of citizenship papers, with the applicant taking the oaths of renunciation of his former land and swearing allegiance to the Queen.

Remarks of welcome from the judge and from a representative of the Citizenship Council.

Mr. Hankinson played the role of judge, Mr. Boyle the clerk of court Mrs. D. W. Burnip and Kenneth Wilmott were witnesses, and Mr. Wilmott gave the concluding address of welcome to the new citizen.

Mr. Boyle was master of ceremonies for the program of entertainment which followed. Traditional Norwegian dances were performed in costume by three Prince Rupert couples Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bjerndal, Mr. and Mrs. Nils Bakke and Mr. and Mrs. John Pedersen. Concluding the group was an intricate dance by Mr. Bakke and Mrs. Bjerndal. Accompanying the Norwegian dancers was Miss Sondra Giske, accordionist.

Also featured were selections by the German Bethal Baptist Church choir directed by Manfred Donnerstag; Swiss yodelling by Marcel Girardet, several Italian songs and dance tunes played by accordionist Marcello Bussanich and a group of traditional Scottish dances performed by students of Mrs. Will Murdoch.

Piper J. C. Ewart provided accompaniment for the Scots dancers who included: Pam Painter, Linda Anderson, Nancy Green, Priscilla Maki, Heather Carlson, Patsy Holbrook, Bobby Ogilvie and Chris Berg, dancing the "Eightsome Reel"; Leona Berg, Carol Green and Chris Berg, the Sword Dance, and Nancy Green, Priscilla Maki and Patsy Holbrook, the Highland Fling.

Winding up the affair were refreshments provided by John Bartazzuol.
