NEW MUNICIPAL READING ROOM FORMALLY OPENED

times. He hoped that later on we should have a library, equipped with the best literature of the world, but this was a good starter and he would feel honored in declaring it open.

Principal Brady of the high school said that in the absence of Rev. F. W. Kerr, who had done so much for this reading room, he was asked to say a few words. He said that not all the literature in the room was in the English language, so that the cosmopolitan character of the city was well represented, and those using the reading room could read the news of their native country in their own language. It was one of the most cosmopolitan reading rooms he had been in for years. He then spoke of the good work done by Mr. Basso-Bert to make the opening a success and expressed the hope that in the near future it would grow into a library in keeping with the magnificent prestige of Prince Rupert.

Rev. Warren McLeod regretted that it had been impossible for Bishop Du Vernet to be present to deliver the words he had prepared for the occasion. For years the city had badly needed such a place of gathering as this. This was one of the stepping stones to the type of public library the city ought to have, and he felt sure everyone must feel grateful for the privileges the committee had placed before them. Also, the committee of the council were to be congratulated on such a room as this—well located, well furnished and so well equipped with magazines and newspapers.

Generally a reading room was regarded as a place for working men, but in this city he hoped this would not be the case. He desired to see the merchants and the professional men using this room and mingling together in hearty fellowship. Possibly the reading room might not be so quiet every evening as the smoking room gave an opportunity for men to gather together to discuss the news of the day and debate public questions, and the next thing necessary would be a public hall for the purpose. Such beginnings as this were an uplift for the intelligence and a looking forward to the future.

Recreation grounds were an absolute necessity and we must have them. The city council had an excellent scheme and they had confidence in their mayor that he would return with sufficient funds to allow of this scheme being carried out and recreation grounds provided for the children and also for the grown-ups. He was speaking the voice of all present that they were glad this day had arrived with a free reading room as a starter.

Alderman Naden then on behalf of the council formally declared the reading room open.

The Canadian Fish and Cold Storage Co.'s trawler George E. Foster arrived in port this afternoon about 2 o'clock with 60,000 pounds of halibut.

Many things are well done that are not worth doing.

"PRINCESS CHIC" AT WESTHOLME TONIGHT

Famous Production Will be Presented With Gorgeous Costumes, Tuneful Music

The Vancouver World of May 13th, in its criticism of the 'Princess Chic,' as played by the Juvenile Bostonians at the Imperial Theatre in the southern metropolis said:

"It was a decidedly appreciative audience that greeted the Juvenile Bostonians last night at the Imperial when they presented 'The Princess Chic,' the famous production of Kirke La Selle and Julian Edwards, in a manner that exceeded all expectations. The name of the play itself is a sufficient recommendation to draw capacity houses to any theatre and those who failed to see the youngsters last night missed a treat. Gorgeous costumes, delightfully tuneful music, sparkling comedy and beautiful scenery added to the clever performance of the youthful artists who seem right at home in a piece that has previously been put on only by seasoned and star actors. The most remarkable and pleasing feature of the presentation is the efficient manner in which these young ladies portray the male characters and sing the difficult score.

With an interesting plot which is unfolded in music and rhyme, intermingled with a pleasing vein of humor, many historic personages are introduced, such as Louis XI of France and Charles the Bold of Burgundy. To win the love of the duke, leaving titles out of the question, the princess disguises herself first as an envoy and again as a peasant maid. In the first disguise she wins the admiration of the duke by her clever sword play, and in the second he falls a victim to her exquisite beauty and simple loveliness.

It is hard to express just how efficiently Miss Thom Heilen performed in the role of the Princess Chic. She has a magnificent voice and her rendering of "I Hear You Calling Me" completely captivated the audience and she was recalled many times. Her two other solos, "Weak as a Woman" and "Love and War," were rendered equally well.

"Billie" O'Neill, as Charles the Bold, won the audience with her clever acting and sweet, rich voice, while Vera Lockhart, taking the part of Francis, got all out of the part that there was in it. As King Louis and Pommard Doris Canfield was a star. Her clear, rich contralto voice was a feature of the evening.

Although her part was not heavy, Stubby Myling, the diminutive soldier of fortune, Brabeau, scored as a big hit as did her comrade, Dixie White as Brevet. Patsy Henry as Chamberlain, steward to the duke, was the life of the company and produced many a laugh with her comical speeches. Daisy Henry, Ruth Fritz and Ina Mitchell all had important roles and were decidedly well placed.
