U of S Regains Net Honors; Splits With U of A in Golf

SASKATOON — University of Saskatchewan players have regained possession of the inter-varsity tennis championship, edging the University of Alberta 5-4 in matches here during the weekend.

In the inter-varsity golf tournament held in conjunction with the tennis, the two universities split the laurels, the U of S women's team winning while their male rivals finished five strokes behind the Albertans.

The tennis win was Saskatchewan's first since 1951 over the Alberta netters.

The male tennis competitors supplied the punch for Saskatchewan winning their three singles matches and their doubles. Lynne England's decisive victory over Alberta's Connie Hoover provided the winning margin.

The U of A won the women's singles matches, the women's doubles and the mixed doubles.

RAE MILLIGAN WINS

Rae Milligan, one of Canada's top-ranking women golfers, provided the U of A with only two victories in the women's golf. She finished nine strokes ahead of Saskatchewan's Gerry Evans in the opening round Saturday and held a three-stroke margin over the Saskatchewan's Women's Open champion in Sunday's round.

Lynne Evans and Sandra Hay, the other two members of the U of S trio, posted easy victories and June Trotter, respectively.

In the men's golf competition, John Kilburn paced the U of S trio with a 36-hole total of 148. Norm Wine scored 169 while Dale Palko fired a 164 to give the Saskatchewan squad a total of 4481. Alberta finished with a total of 476, five strokes ahead a Brandon College finished third with a total of 514. Brandon took part in the men's golf only. Laurie Craddock carded 80 and 78, Bob Storey 98 and 90 and Jerry Prior 82 and 86.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

Throw-in, or End-Play, Enjoys Great Popularity

The squeeze play is probably the favorite of the serious students of the game, but the end-play, or throw-in, has wider popularity because it comes up more frequently.

How to recognize the end-play and how to execute it successfully will be our theme in this and several following columns.

Today's hand is a simple one but it illustrates a basic principle or two. Playing a four spade contract, Mr. Dale had one loser in hearts and as many as three losers in clubs if he led clubs himself. How convenient and profitable it would be if he could arrange to have the enemy start the club suit.

FAVORABLE LEAD

He got a favorable lead, a trump, and he won with the king. He laid down the ace of spades. Then he cashed four rounds of diamonds, exhausting the defenders of a second suit. Next he led his lone ten of hearts and Mr. Abel won with the jack.

Examine the situation at this point. Mr. Abel had only hearts and clubs left. If he led the ace of clubs Mr. Dale would naturally play small from his own hand and the dummy. Then he would be certain of winning the third round of the suit with queen.

If Mr. Abel led a low club Mrs. Keen would have to play the king (or not win the trick) and again Mr. Dale would play low from his hand and the board. Actually Mr. Abel didn't lead a club. He returned a heart, hoping there was one more in the closed hand. But Mr. Dale ruffed in dummy and discarded a small crab from his hand.

THE ESSENCE

In effect he got rid of one of his club losers on one of dummy's trumps.

The essence of this play is to strip every possible card from the opponent's hand before surrendering the lead. If Mr. Dale had not played out his diamond in this hand before putting Mr. Abel in with a heart, he would have had no advantage at all. Mr. Abel would simply have returned a diamond without damage to his side. And Mr. Dale would have had to play the crabs himself, losing a total of three club tricks.

Annual Pony League Banquet Postponed Until October 26

Annual banquet for Prince Rupert Pony League players originally scheduled for tomorrow night at the Commodore has been set ahead until October 26 at the same place, Harold Thom, league president, said this morning.

Postponement was made necessary, Mr. Thom said, because there had been a delay in the arrival of the trophy, donated by Esquire Men's Wear for the Pony champions. In addition, jackets ordered by some 24 of the players had also not arrived, Mr. Thom said.

Besides the banquet, Pony Leaguers will see baseball films run off, including a condensation of the 1954 World Series.

Players, managers, coaches and sponsors will join with special guests for the banquet.
