Henhouse Boy Makes Progress In Orphanage

BELFAST (Reuters)—A seven year old boy, described as "a hairy Tarzan" by children who found him cooped up in a farm henhouse, is reported making "surprising progress" in a Belfast orphanage.

The boy was found Wednesday on a farm at Loughinisland, County Down. He was said to have lived all his life cooped up in the henhouse and to make noises like a chicken when he was given poultry food to eat. Reports also said he had long matted hair which propted the children to call him "a hairy Tarzan."

Authorities arrested his mother Friday without disclosing the charge.
