SGT. JOHN PEARSON (M) AND MRS. PEARSON

Pearson-Moorehouse Vows Exchanged at Cathedral

Two honor guards from the 120th West Coast Harbor Defence Troop, RCA (M) and members of three armed services provided an impressive background for the military wedding of Carole June Moorehouse on the evening of February 16 when she became the bride of Militia Sgt. John Pearson in the St. Andrew's Anglican Cathedral with Canon Basil S. Brockter officiating.

The bride, the granddaughter of two pioneering Prince Rupert families is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Nellie Moorehouse of Vancouver and recently of this city and the late R.C.M.P. Cpl. Thomas Moorehouse. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Pearson of 319 Eleventh Avenue East.

The groom's dress blues enhanced his bride's ankle-length gown of white net inserted with lace. The strapless bodice of Brussels lace which tiered the bouffont skirt was topped with a tiny lace bolero featuring a Peter Pan collar and long-fitted sleeves. A white flowered headband secured the bride's misty chapel veil and a white orchid graced the tiny prayer book she carried.

She was escorted by her brother, Ordinary Seaman Thomas Moorehouse, RCN (R). Her only jewellery was a necklace and earrings set of brilliants borrowed from the groom's mother.

Miss Sheran Lowe, maid of honor wore a mint and lace pink gown, styled similar to that of the bride and she carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations. L.A.C. Marion [illegible] William Evans, son of C.P.O. R. Evans, officer commanding the 120th West Coast Harbor Defence Troop, attended the groom as best man. Ushers were Pte. Albert Charles Thode, and Cpl. Gordon Beaty. Peter Lien was organist.

An honor guard of Canadian Women's Army Corps, of which the bride was a member, flanked the Cathedral entrance while an honor guard of eight PMQs from NCO's of the rifles, with lined bayonets to form an arch on the Cathedral steps as the bridal party left the church.

When the bridal party entered the Armories for the reception in the Sergeant's Mess, Sgt. Major Darrow Gomez, DCM (M), brought up the armed honor guard to arched rifles flanked by the NCO's and members of Band then led the bridal procession.

A two-tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom and flanked by white tapers, centred the bridal table. Captain Evans proposed the toast to the bride.

Mrs. H. J. Wilson, grandmother of the bride, wore a two-piece dress of black and white checked silk, navy accessories and a corsage of white carnations and blue iris. The groom's mother wore a black lace-over-taffeta ensemble, pink accessories and a corsage of white carnations and blue iris.

Serviteurs were Mrs. Howard LaForge, Miss Delphine Astoria, Mrs. Louis Astoria and Miss Sheila Bennett.

Newlyweds have taken up residence at 616 Taylor Street. Mr. Pearson is employed with the Prince Rupert Fire Department while Mrs. Pearson is employed as a stenographer at the Canadian government elevator.
