B.C.-Born Movie Actor Raymond Burr Slims Down For Role as Kidnapper

Special to The Daily News

HOLLYWOOD—In the case of Raymond Burr, who weighs 190 pounds in his role of a kidnapper in Warners' "A Cry In the Night," it has been a triumph of mind over matter. Burr, who's 6 foot 2 inches weighed 300 pounds not long ago. But then he went on a rigid prescribed diet to reacquire his relatively sylph-like physique.

Ten years ago, when he first came to Hollywood, and RKO signed him for the romantic lead in "The Robe," Ray weighed 185. Then, after a year's inactivity during which time he lost out on "The Robe" when RKO sold the property to Fox, Ray's weight increased so much that producers decided he was big enough to play Sydney Greenstreet-type parts.

For the next few years, as a result, Burr played such roles, including that of the tremendous prosecuting attorney in "A Place in the Sun." After "A Place in the Sun," Ray decided a wider range of parts would be available to him if he narrowed down, and that was when he lost more than 100 pounds.

Ray, who was born in New Westminster, British Columbia, lived variously in China and Hong Kong before he returned to Canada with his family when he was 11 years old. He first appeared professionally as an actor when he was 12. Thereafter he attended military school, Stanford University, Columbia University and the University of Chungking, then he worked as a cowboy, salesman and radio repairman before settling down to a career of acting.

Burr appeared on the stage in Canada, England and Australia before coming to the United States. Upon recovery from a serious illness soon after his arrival in the United States, Burr entered the U.S. Forestry Service and for two years operated a weather bureau in a remote part of Oregon.

With his health regained, Burr acted on Broadway in the musical, "Crazy With the Heat," then went to Hollywood. His many films included "The Adventures of Don Juan," "Mara Maru," "Key to the City," "His Kind of Woman," "A Place in the Sun," "New Mexico," "Meet Danny Wilson," "The Blue Gardenia," "Casanova's Big Night," "Rear Window" and "A Cry in the Night."
