Modern Insurance

We hear a great deal now-a-days about crooked insurance and the iniquities of insurance companies, and a great many people look on insurance with profound distrust. Still it must be apparent to any sane person that it is a very

Of course there are some very crooked people in the insurance business, as in all other businesses, and a few inother words men are not angels. Nevertheless it cannot be denied that insurance in its fullest and collective sense is only second to capital itself as an elementary part of the industrial machine. It is a great equalizing influence that spreads itself over the whole vast field of human enterprise. to lessen, yea, almost to eliminate the great catastrophes that every once in a while overtake the community, making the losses to bear rather "light upon the many than heavy upon the few,"-making sport of calamities and disasters that would otherwise appal, paralyze and perhaps overwhelm the energy and fortitude of the whole population. We insure you against the destructive elements of fire air (FIRE); -against the raging sea (MARINE); against the machinations of the wicked (BONDS); -against the thief in the night (BURGLARY); --- we insure you against the staggering drunkard (PLATE GLASS) :against the legal action of those employed by you, and that lawyers will not fatten off you (EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY)

we insure you during the swift hours of fleeting pleasure (AUTOMOBILE):—and lastly, when life is over, and you have passed out of this earthly existence, we carry forward your personality and foresight into future ages, and insure those near and dear to you against want and misery, and thereby even assure you of getting a loving remembrance after you have passed away (LIFE).

Nor, dear reader, must you think us sacriligious when we say we have provided against some at least of the contingencies of what may befall you in the life beyond the grave. great many people believe in the doctrine of the transmigration of souls,-that, after death, we live again in the bodies of animals, etc. Should such be the case, and should you be reincarnated in the body of some domestic animal, do not forget that we carry live stock insurance, and can insure you of a useful and profitable existence for those who may own you in that future state. Such is the wide range of abilities of a modern and up-to-date general insurance office such as that of PECK, MOORE & CO.
