Trumps In Dummy Kept As Entries

If you are looking for a way to drive your partner out of his mind, one method is to leave a trump outstanding and have an opponent ruff in to defeat an otherwise ice-cold contract.

Of course there are times when Partner will hate you because you DO clear the trump suit at your first opportunity. There are a number of situations where declarer must postpone leading trumps and today's hand illustrates one of them — the case where the trumps in dummy must be preserved as vital entries.

Mr. Meek led the jack of hearts, dummy's four went on and Mr. Abel played the seven. Mr. Muzzy won with the ace of hearts and promptly cashed the ace of spades. Then, realizing suddenly that he was going to have to do something about setting up dummy's diamonds, he switched to the deuce of that suit.

Mr. Meek ducked and dummy's queen won. There was no way for Mr. Muzzy to know that the ace was now alone on his left and he faced the problem of returning to his hand for another diamond lead.

If he led to the ace of clubs, he would set up a club loser, and the ace of diamonds would put that, with two heart losers and him down a trick. So he came to his hand with the queen of spades and led his last diamond.

Mr. Meek won and returned the ten of hearts. This won and another heart went to Mr. Abel's king. A club was returned and Mr. Muzzy won with the ace. Now he led a spade to dummy's king and cashed the king of diamonds, sluffing a club. But the diamonds failed to break and down he went.

WINNING PLAY

Mr. Muzzy should have led a diamond at trick two. Mr. Meek would duck and the queen would win. Now a small spade to the ace and another diamond lead. Mr. Meek would win and, as before, the defender would cash two hearts and follow with a club lead.

But now Mr. Muzzy would have the hand made. He could win with the ace of clubs and lead the nine of spades to dummy's king. When the ten dropped, the rest of the play would fall neatly into place. He could return a small diamond and ruff it high.

Next, the four of spades to dummy's eight would permit the cashing of two good diamonds and the discarding of both losing clubs from the closed hand.
