Nominations Sometimes Lost In Primaries

WASHINGTON (AP)—Presidential nominations are never won—but occasionally are lost—in the primaries which will be occupying voters in 18 states almost up to the time of the national conventions of the two major parties next summer.

While a primary gives voters a chance to indicate a preference as to their party's standard-bearer and decide the make-up of the state's convention delegation, varying state laws never bind the delegates to down-the-line support of the primary presidential choice.

In some states convention delegates are required to give initial support to the primary winner. In others they are uncommitted by the result of the "popularity contest."

However, the significance attached to primary results by party politicians sometimes decisively affects the prospects of a presidential candidate.

WILLKIE'S FATE

A prominent case was the fate of Wendell Willkie, the unsuccessful Republican candidate against President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1940 and a contender for renomination four years later.

In the 1944 Wisconsin primary, one of the first to be decided, Willkie made a dismal showing and his candidacy collapsed. Thomas E. Dewey, then governor of New York State, was the eventual nominee.

Few political observers believe that the upset of Adlai Stevenson by Senator Estes Kefauver in Tuesday's Minnesota primary will have a similarly devastating effect on the fortunes of the nominee. But it is generally conceded that the defeat cost Stevenson his status as the front-runner for the nomination.

BOUND TO SUPPORT

In Minnesota and Wisconsin, convention delegates are bound to support their state's primary choice on the first ballot, and on all subsequent ballots until his vote shrinks to 10 per cent of the convention total. Their requirements are the most stringent of any of the state primaries.

Other states make no specific requirements of support of their primary choice, although delegations from New Jersey, Massachusetts and Florida are "morally bound" to support him.

In 30 states the voter has no choice in choosing convention delegates and no chance to state his presidential choice before election day. State party gatherings pick their delegations, with or without instructions on how to cast their ballots in the convention hall.

LIKE A SHMOO! — Looking not a little like the fabulous shmoo, which won international fame in recent years in Al Capp's "Li'l Abner" comic strip, this odd-haped egg is hardly one a chicken would recognize. For with a face the drawing, the shell resembled Capp's shmoo. The egg was laid on the poultry farm managed by J. D. Richerson near Spring Hill, Kan.

Wings Take 2-Game Edge As Leafs Go Down 3-1

DETROIT (AP)—Toronto Maple Leafs today faced a barrier that only two teams in the 38-year-history of the National Hockey League have hurdled—winning a Stanley Cup playoff series after losing the first two games.

Leafs dropped their second straight game Thursday night against Detroit Red Wings. The Wings beat them 3-1 and grabbed a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven semi-final set.

Only the Leaf club of 1942 and the Detroit team of 1945 ever mastered the big comeback.

Leafs, who finished fourth in the regular 70-game schedule this season, learned Thursday night it doesn't pay to carve up Ted Lindsay.

The 163-pound Detroit left winger, nicked for three stitches by Tod Sloan's stick during a second-period melee, returned after a hurried patching job to score the winning goal barely two minutes after his penalty time had expired.

Until Lindsay scored, it had been anyone's game. Following the script of last Tuesday's battle, which Wings won 3-2, Toronto got the only first-period goal with Armstrong deflecting home a long shot, just as he did in the series-opener.

Alex Delvecchio, another opening-game hero, tied the score early in the second period.

On one of Detroit's few third-period sorties Lorne Ferguson got an insurance goal, banging home Metro Prystal's pass from behind the nets.

The best-of-seven series resumes in Toronto Saturday night.
