THE LOCAL BOXER LEM KEGG TRIUMPHS OVER ED. SHANNON

SPIRITED FIGHT OF FIFTEEN ROUNDS RESULTED IN THE DECISION BEING AWARDED TO LEM KEGG—CYC-LONE WON FROM CAMPBELL

The McIntyre Hall was well filled last night by a crowd of men patrons of sport who had the satisfaction of watching a really good pugilistic contest. Lem Kegg of this city and Ed. Shannon, of Seattle, a pair of well matched lightweights, furnished the sport, fighting out the full fifteen rounds. It was clear from the beginning that there was nothing faked about the fight. The boxers went at it hard from the opening of the first round and if there was no knock out it was not for the lack of trying for one.

for some reason unable to act and another man had to be called on. Eventually a first rate referee was obtained by good luck, from amongst the audience. Mr. Jones, of New York, a stranger to Prince Rupert, but no stranger to the ring, did the work to perfection.

WAS A SALT LAKE IN PREHISTORIC TIMES

Is Opinion of Mineral Expert Concerning Salt Bed Up the Skeena.

A. Forbes, mineral expert for the provincial government, who has been making a report on various mining properties in the north, returned yesterday from a visit to the salt beds at Mile 45, in which F. H. Mobley and others of this city are interested. Mr. Forbes last evening said there was no doubt as to the presence of immense salt beds there and was confident that if the salt has sufficient purity the property is a most valuable one. Two natural seepages at least two miles apart show conclusively that there is a large bed. Mr. Forbes remarked that it would be hard to convince the average geologist that such a salt bed existed in the heart of a range of granite mountains. As a possible explanation of its existence he thought that it had been a salt lake in prehistoric times before the Skeena had made its present course.

A simple and excellent way to remove dirty marks from a mackintosh is to cut a raw potato in slices and rub it well on the marks. It will also remove mud stains from dress skirts, children's coats and gentlemen's trousers.

MEXICAN SQUABBLES ATTRACT ATTENTION OF GREAT BRITAIN

QUESTION OF SENDING WARSHIPS TO MEXICAN WATERS AS BRITISHERS IN REPUBLIC ARE ENDANGERED—U.S. CONSIDERING SUGGESTIONS

(Special to The Daily News.) London, July 25.—Sir Edward Grey, secretary for foreign affairs, is keeping in close communication with the Admiralty in case British warships in Mexican waters should be considered necessary. The British Minister to Mexico has reported that His Majesty's subjects there are in great danger.

In the United States. Washington, July 25.—The developments in the Mexican situation yesterday were confined to the discussion of a number of suggested plans for coping with the dangerous difficulties, and for the purpose of arriving at some definite policy on the part of the American administration toward the neighboring republic. Every kind of plan has been suggested, from a mediation board of Americans to adjust the disputes between the warring Mexican factions to a tripartite commission the latter to be composed of representatives of the United States and of two South American republics. This latter suggestion is finding some favor. But there will be no definite expression of policy on the part of the government until the conference between President Wilson and Mexican Ambassador Lane Wilson, who is now here. Probably this conference will take place on Monday.

SMITHERS MADE HOLIDAY WHEN REACHED BY RAILS OF G. T. P.

UNBOUNDED ENTHUSIASM WAS DISPLAYED BY RESIDENTS OF BULKLEY VALLEY WHEN TRACK LAYING MACHINE CAME IN SIGHT.

Smithers, B. C., July 24.—Probably the most remarkably welcome ever given to a new railroad in British Columbia was that extended by this town to contractors and workmen when steel of the Grand Trunk Pacific reached here last week. Unbounded enthusiasm was shown by Bulkley Valley residents who have waited for years for the sight of a railway locomotive. When the track laying machine rounded the curve east of Smithers and poked its nose out on the long tangent that passes through the town it was the signal for a big demonstration. Signs of welcome were displayed and people of Smithers and the surrounding country made holiday. They were not slow in displaying their enthusiasm and as the men actually laying the rails and spiking them to the ties were the nearest representatives of the railway available they showered their attentions upon them. Those who had been at work on the track were treated like high railway officials, being given refreshments and cigars, congratulated upon their good work in bringing the steel to Smithers two weeks before the contractors had promise to reach this point and made to feel that their efforts had an important part in accomplishing the desired result. The track laborers had never before experienced such appreciation and although the life of a railway worker as a rule is not a too happy one, these men for once thoroughly enjoyed themselves. William Dempsey, in charge of the track laying machine, was given an ovation. He said that although he had been engaged in work of this kind for twenty years, he had never been given such a welcome as he had received from the Smithers people.

FISHERMAN WAS DROWNED OFF LAUNCH IN HARBOR YESTERDAY

MAN KNOWN AS LAWRENCE BURNS FELL OFF LAUNCH VERA NEAR DAVIS' FLOAT AND WAS DROWNED BEFORE HELP COULD REACH HIM.

A fisherman known here as Lawrence Burns, working for Captain Vincent of the launch Vera, was drowned at 2:45 yesterday afternoon near the Davis float. His real name was discovered from letter and papers in his coat to be Rowland Balsover. Balsover was born in Longsight, Manchester, England, in 1887. He was an able bodied seaman who was paid off the British ship Talthybius at Vancouver in December, 1912, and came here recently.

engine room. As soon as Vincent saw his partner drop over the side he cut the dinghy loose in order that it might drift back and Balsover might have a chance of catching it while he turned the head of the Vera. But Balsover did not notice this and kept swimming for shore. During this time a number of men were trying to get to the rescue from shore. They had plenty of rowboats but no oars, so they started up their gasoline boats.

Captain Vincent said that he had known Burns, as the man was called, for fourteen days and had made two trips with him. On the last trip they had had a good catch and having divided the money went up town to make some purchases. They then returned to the launch and put out from shore. When they had left the boat house a couple of hundred feet behind, Vincent asked Balsover to move a case of gasoline from forward to amidships. Just as he was placing the case amidships on a seat the vessel gave a roll and Balsover dropped the case and rolled over the side of the boat, which was under way.

Meanwhile Vincent was trying to get to Balsover with his launch, but as the boat has a long stern it took some time to turn her. When brought around her faulty keel caused her to go nearly on the rocks. But by this time poor Balsover had sunk for the last time, with the nearest boat only ten feet away. The body has not been recovered.
