Partner Should Not Be Harrassed As Criticism Does Not Help Play

Mr. Heinsite might describe a partner as follows. "A partner has many uses. When things go wrong you can show that he is at fault. If you make an error yourself, you can usually manage to blame that on him, too. You can almost always prove you are smarter than he is. And that makes you feel good."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♥
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	All Pass

All of this may be true, but I have one comment to make. It is expensive.

Let me suggest an attitude toward partner which, apparently, is not widely popular. He is playing as well as he can, but will fall far below that level if he is harrassed with criticism.

Sometimes it may be hard to believe but actually he is trying to help you. You should try to help him. If you make it a parnership in the true sense of the word I think you'll have just as much fun. And I know you'll show a bigger profit.

In today's deal Mr. New led the seven of hearts. Mr. Heinsite won with the ten, cashed the ace, then led the king. On the third heart Mr. New signaled with the ten of clubs and Mr. Dale ruffed in dummy with the trey of spades.

He returned the queen of spades, trapped the king, picked up the last trumps and discarded his two clubs and dummy's diamonds. Thus he made five-odd.

"Didn't you have a trump higher than dummy's trey?" asked Mr. Heinsite, who already knew the answer.

"Just ruff the third round of hearts with your five of spades and when dummy overruffs with the jack, that makes me a sure trump trick with the king-ten over dummy's queen."

Mr. Heinsite's suggested play would have set the contract. In addition to setting up a trump winner, it would have prevented Mr. Dale from getting rid of his clubs in time.

There is no denying that Mr. New was asleep at the switch.

But Mr. Heinsite knew his partner was not a keen player. He could have made the winning line of defense much easier to see if he had returned the four of hearts at trick three instead of the king. Mr. Dale would have covered it with the nine.

Certainly this startling development would have increased the chances that Mr. New would see fit to play a trump on the trick.

Mr. Heinsite would undoubtedly say that it shouldn't be necessary to "baby" your partner in this manner. But if it gets you the top result on a hand where's the harm?

TO QUIT LINE

TORONTO (CP)—Rhys M. Sale, president of Ford Motor Company of Canada, announced Wednesday night that the Monarch line of cars will be discontinued and that the 635 Monarch dealers in Canada instead will handle the company's newest car, the Edsel.

Slipstream

By JIM HEGAN

We have another new member. He is Ray Reimera, welder in town. Glad to have you with us, Ray.

Larry Fytcheson made his first solo flight last week. It's a great feeling, isn't it, Larry?

We're going to lose a possible member of our club. Lorne Stevens, our entertainment officer is to be transferred to Kamloops. Norman Hanks will be away on holidays for the next three weeks. We're going to miss him.

Len Olson put a couple of dents on the right wing of one of the planes when he was taxiing a couple of days ago. But we'll let you off easy, Len. The harbor really is full of junk right now.

Len says we have two more prospective members coming over from the Charlottes. I just heard that Frank Johnson is back from Kitimat. Glad to have you back Frank and we'll see you at Ground School. O.K.?

We all appreciate the time you give to instructing us.

By the way gang, the end of September is coming close. Better have that flying and ground school while Len is with us full time.
