Remember When
By The Canadian Press

The Grey Cup final was watched by 6,000 fans when the Ottawa Rough Riders trounced Winnipeg Tammany Tigers by 34-1 at Lansdown Park, Ottawa, 33 years ago today. The classic was young then, and bad weather and a muddy field didn't help.

Blackwood on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

There is a principle of defensive play in this hand which comes up fairly frequently. It is often missed because, by its very nature, it goes against the grain of many players—particularly the impatient player who wants to win his tricks fast.

In view of the vulnerability situation, Mr. Dale decided to forego the pleasure of doubling Mr. Muzzy's spade overcall. He felt that more points could be gained by going ahead and winning the rubber.

Against the final contract of three no trump Mr. Champion dutifully led the nine of spades. When Mr. Muzzy played the queen, Mr. Dale gave the matter some thought before playing to the trick.

Clearly he had no chance for nine tricks unless he brought in at least one club and that meant letting the enemy in twice. If Mr. Muzzy had both high club honors, the contract was probably hopeless. But if one high club was in Mr. Champion's hand, there was a chance. Even then an effort to cut defenders' communication would be in order.

Mr. Dale

So Mr. Dale played the ten of spades at trick one. The eight of spades was returned and he was relieved when his pack held the trick. He led a club and dummy's ten lost to the ace. Mr. Muzzy now led another spade but he had no possible entry for the rest of the suit. At this point the defense was dead. After winning with the ace of spades, Mr. Dale gave up a trick to the king of clubs, then claimed the balance.

Mr. Muzzy's correct play at trick one was a small spade, preferably the eight, to indicate interest in further spade leads from his partner.

This play had absolutely nothing to lose. Mr. Champion's lead of the nine could easily be read as top of nothing and therefore Mr. Dale was marked with ace, jack and ten. There was no way to prevent him from winning two spades.

The important point was, however, to force him to win the first spade because that would leave a spade in Mr. Champion's hand. On the first club lead, Mr. Champion could step in with the king and lead the deuce of spades. Thus Mr. Muzzy would be in a position to knock out his opponents' last spade stopper while he still had the ace of clubs in his hand.

too thought that the B.C. Indian would "level off' after the novelty of going into beer parlors disappeared.

"I'm sorry I cannot say that about the B.C. Indians."

He said he had seen Native women staggering about helplessly drunk, with tiny children following behind them.

When it came to a vote the branch delegates voted for full liquor rights.

The convention closed with Brotherhood president Robert Clifton thanking Mayor P. J. Lester for the hospitality extended the delegates by Prince Rupert.

At a dinner staged for the newly-elected Brotherhood executive by the Prince Rupert City council at the Broadway cafe, Mr. Clifton said that "history has been made when we can sit down with the City Council. We have proved that whites and Indians can walk side by side."

Mayor Lester told the executive that the Brotherhood was welcome to hold its conventions in Prince Rupert anytime since this city was "the first to be host to a Brotherhood convention."

Later at a dance in the HMCS Chatham drill hall the Brotherhood staged its convention ball with door prizes financed by donations from city merchants. Door prizes included a mink stole, a women's wrist watch and a man's cigarette lighter.

Ev Shiers rink ahead in Cooks Trophy play

With play for the Cooks Jewellers trophy in the final stages leaving two games for each team, Ev Shier's rink remained undefeated after scoring an easy 12-4 victory over the Johnston rink.

Jack Eby and Jack Lindsay are leading B Section with only one loss. A. MacDonald has two losses while Rudderham, Simpson, Ford and Berg are all eager to produce a photo-finish with three losses each.

Jack Paul and Stan Cooper are setting the pace in C section with 1 loss each while Parker, Dominato and the Scott rink intend to provide excitement in the battle for the third playoff spot with two losses under their belts.

In D section Garner and Pallister are on top with one loss and Schuman and Giordano are close behind with only two losses.

Both E and F sections are in three-way ties for top spot with Simundson, Tuttle and Gomez each having marked up only one defeat.
