BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Superb Handling of Hand Today Gives North-South 4 Spade Contract

Miss Brash tried bravely but unsuccessfully to shut out the opposition with a jump to four hearts over Mr. Masters' takeout double.

Mr. Dale's hand looks a little thin for a free bid at the four level, but his four spade call was justified. There was an excellent chance that Mr. Masters had a good spade spade holding of at least four cards. And if the opponents could beat four spades as much as two tricks, the chances were good that they could make four hearts. If, by some remote chance, Mr. Masters saw fit to bid five clubs or five diamonds, Mr. Dale's hand would be quite a respectable dummy for either contract.

Four spades was there all right but it had to be handled carefully. Mr. Abel led the king of hearts and Miss Brash played the deuce.

Mr. Abel now decided that a shift was called for. Since he held the jack of diamonds, a diamond shift didn't seem to offer much hope. He therefore played the queen of clubs.

This was a good shot and now it was Mr. Dale who had the problem. Since the pack of clubs was showing on the board, it appeared that the queen was a singleton or part of a doubleton. If he ducked and the queen was a singleton, Miss Brash could overtake with the king and return the suit for her partner to ruff.

But she could not know whether the queen was a singleton or not and might not make that play. There was also the point that if Mr. Abel had started with a lone club, he probably would have let it at trick one. With these thoughts in mind, Mr. Dale elected to let the queen of clubs win.

Mr. Abel then led his last club. Dummy's ace won and the queen af spades was led and finessed. Mr. Abel won with the king but since he was out of clubs there was no way to cash the setting trick. Desperately, he underled his ace of hearts, but Mr. Dale ruffed, picked up the remaining trumps and discarded dummy's last two clubs on his long diamond suit.

"KID" OUTSLUGGED

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ralph (Tiger) Jones of Brooklyn scored a split decision over Kid Gavilan of Cuba in a 10-round slugfest Wednesday night that had the crowd roaring at the finish.

Gavilan looked sharp at times but his punches lacked their old sting and he appeared to tire at the end. He weighed 154½ to Jones' 154¾.
