Three Factors Necessary For Children

TORONTO (CP)— Integrity, loyalty and sympathy are the essential ingredients to be instilled in young personalities, says one of Canada's top child psychologists.

Dr. William E. Blatz, founder and director of the Institute of Child Study at the University of Toronto, says that if a child acquires these three qualities its parents have succeeded regardless of any other factor.

Dr. Blatz told a public forum here on development of the normal child that whether or not a child ever learns to read and write, acquisition of integrity, loyalty and sympathy would decide his place in the social community as a well-adjusted and valuable member.

Integrity he defined as including honesty, but going beyond that definition "to the point where the individual is willing to accept the consequences of his contribution to society: where he is unwilling to take more than he deserves; and where he looks first at what he has to give before he asks what he is going to get."

TRUST IMPORTANT

Sympathy, he said, not only enables the individual to read into another's behavior his own feelings and motives, but also enables him to recognize another's feelings as being just as important as his own.

Loyalty develops as the child realizes that he is part of a closeknit group, the family, within which no pretence and no defence and no fear is necessary and where acceptance is his, regardless of what he does.

"One of the most beautiful things I know is the complete trust between parent and child . . . "The world's unhappiness will not be prevented by psychologists or psychiatrists—but by parents."

Lana Turner, Lex Barker Separated

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Lana Turner and her husband, Lex Barker, have separated after 3½ years of marriage.

Miss Turner said Barker moved into a hotel Monday night at her request. She added that she plans to consult a lawyer, but she did not say when.

Barker, the screen's 10th Tarzan, was married to the blonde actress in Turin, Italy, in September, 1953.

Miss Turner, 37, was wed formerly to Artie Shaw, twice to stock broker Stephen Crane and to sportsman Henry J. (Bob) Topping. Barker, 38, was married previously to actresses Constance Thurlowe and Arlene Dahl.
