OVER SEVENTY - FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR GATE FOR FIRST GAME

PREDICTED THAT IT WILL BE NEARLY AS LARGE WHEN THE GIANTS MEET THE PHILLIES ON THE HOME DIAMOND THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Daily News.)
New York, Oct. 8.—The first game of the world's series, played yesterday, was a "lulu" in every way, and created the wildest excitement from start to finish, as can be judged from the scores made each inning, which appeared on the gigantic billboard as follows:
Philadelphia ..... 0 0 0 0 2 0 0 4—6
New York ..... 0 0 1 0 3 0 0 0—4
The batteries were—For Philadelphia, Bender and Schang, and for New York Marquard, Randall and Tesreau, the latter being called from the bench in the seventh inning.
The immense crowd which attended can be best judged by the gate, which amounted to $75,255. Of this large sum the National Commission gets $7,525, the clubs $13,546 each, and divided among the players $40,638. It is expected that there will be nearly as large a crowd at Philadelphia this afternoon to watch the second game of the series, as the special trains from here this morning were all densely crowded

TWO GIRLS POSE AS HUSBAND AND WIFE

Wife Knew Bridegroom Was a Woman—Planned the Scheme to Obtain Education.

Meeker, Colo., Oct. 4.—"Handsome" Jack Hill, who for two years has been the ideal of masculinity in the eyes of the young women of Meeker and who was known to the men as "the chap who married the prettiest girl in the White River country," is a woman.
The disclosure has been made and she has been bound over to the October term of the District Court, charged with impersonating a man.
Miss Anna Slifka, whom the good looking "Jack Hill" married, supplemented her "husband's" confession with one in which she stated that she knew before the "marriage" that "her husband's" name was Helen Halstead, and that the two arranged the affair so that they might work together in earning money to take care of them through an eastern college.
Two years ago Helen Halstead arrived here attired as a man. "He" quickly became the beau of the town, courting many, but finally centering "his" attentions on Miss Slifka. Miss Slifka's brother recently became suspicious and started an investigation, which resulted in revealing the "bridegroom's" identity.
"I dressed in boy's clothing and came west because I wanted to work my way through college," she said today. "A working girl hasn't any chance in the east, and I thought I could dress like a man and get work on a ranch in the west, where I could earn enough by drawing a man's wages to start me in a good school."

The little pet, which stands about 38 inches high, was bred in Wales on a ranch belonging to Rt. Hon. Lloyd-George. Mr. Kirkpatrick purchased it at the New Westminster fair from P. A. Cox of Brantford, Ontario. It is thoroughly trained for both riding and driving. Until the novelty wears off Gordon will have more friends than any other boy in the city. All the kiddies will be anxious to have a ride or a drive behind the cute little equine.

SCHOONER AURORA CAPTURED NOT FAR FROM THIS PORT

SHE OWED A BILL TO A VANCOUVER FIRM FOR HER ENGINES AND HAD SKIPPED TO SEA WITHOUT PAYING FOR IT

The passengers going down on the Prince Rupert Monday had the unique experience of witnessing an arrest at sea. Not the arrest of an individual merely but of the power schooner Aurora. About a hundred miles out of here the Prince Rupert came up with the tug Buster B, flying a blue ensign at her mast and carrying a gold braided marshall from Vancouver aboard. The blue ensign meant that when the Buster B sighted the Aurora she could act as a blue-coated policeman would when he finds someone he is in search of, the blue ensign at her truck being the mark of her authority. That is what some of the passengers of the Prince Rupert had the pleasure of witnessing. The boat was not hand cuffed, as a fleeing debtor might be, but Captain

Brown threw a towline on board of her and lugged her in this humiliating fashion back to the port of Vancouver.
The arrest of the boat is the outcome of civil proceedings for debt, Messrs. Momsen & Rowe holding a judgment for $1200 against the boat for putting engines into her. The Aurora was once a well-known sealer, but after the passing of the treaty to stop sealing she was sold, refitted, equipped with engines and put on the run carrying mail and freight from inter Harbor at the north end of Vancouver Island to Sea Otter Cove and other places north of Vancouver Island, to Sea Otter Cove and other places north of the mail route.

FUNDS FOR RELIEF OF NOME SUFFERERS START IN SEATTLE

FIRE BROKE OUT AMONG WRECKED BUILDINGS AND FIRE APPARATUS IS OUT OF BUSINESS—THE SURF SWEEPS FARTHER INLAND.

(Special to The Daily News.)
Seattle, Oct. 8.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday raised one thousand dollars among its members for the relief of the Nome sufferers. Besides this, contributions of lumber have been requested, with which to restore the damaged buildings capable of repair. The steamer Senator, which was to sail for Nome today, will be held until it is known by wireless what articles are most desired in Nome. The early closing of Behring Sea by ice from the Arctic Ocean is feared. surf which overwhelmed the city continues to sweep still farther inland, scooping deep holes and creating new hills. Blinded by salt spray and whirling snow clouds, men and women are still fighting to save their lives and what is most valuable among the wreckage. To add to their misery the ruined buildings yesterday took fire and the fire apparatus was found to be entirely useless, the greatest anxiety is felt in regard to food, most of the stores for the coming winter having been spoiled or swept away.

Nome, Oct. 8.—(Later.)—The storm is beginning to abate. Three unidentified bodies have been washed ashore. Five hundred people are homeless and help from the outside will be necessary.

STARTING OF NIGHT SCHOOLS IS DISCUSSED BY CITIZENS

SUBJECTS TO BE TAKEN UP WAS CHIEF QUESTION AT LAST NIGHT'S MEETING—COMMITTEE WILL FORMULATE LATE PLANS.

As a move toward establishing night schools in the city a public meeting was held in the city hall last night. Mayor Pattullo was unanimously chosen as chairman of the meeting and R. W. Godson was elected secretary. Rev. F. W. Kerr, being one of the prime movers in the matter, was asked to enlighten the meeting as to any plans that had been formulated. He said there seemed to be an earnest desire in the city for night schools which might be along either commercial or technical lines. Among the subjects that might be taken up were mathematics, English, metallurgy, electrical engineering, etc. He suggested that the school board might be willing to allow the use of the schools for holding the classes.

R. H. Shockley was of the opinion that a mixed course, commercial and technical, would be most satisfactory. He thought that as soon as five students for any subject were enrolled a class be formed.
H. Shaw agreed that the subjects suggested would be a great help to those wanting instruction. There are many men in various trades who are not proficient and desired to improve themselves. If there are enough men in the city who would avail themselves of the opportunity he considered it would be well to establish night schools.

At this point the chairman suggested that a committee of five be appointed to formulate definite plans. Rev. Mr. Kerr agreed with this and added that on this committee there should be men representing different classes of work. He moved that such a committee be appointed, Mr. Shaw seconding the motion, which was carried.
Mr. Kerr said he would like to hear from Mr. Nelson as to the prospects of the school, board assisting in the matter. Mr. Nelson, in reply, said he could speak only as one member of the board, but he would be only too willing to co-operate in every possible way in regard to the use of the schools. He drew attention to the fact that the seats were for children and would not be comfortable for adults. He thought the board should have consid-

CANADIAN OFFER TO AID ULSTER WILL BE CONSIDERED TODAY

CARSON LEAVING FOR LONDON TO CONTINUE HIS LAW PRACTICE—BELIEVED THERE IS A SCREW LOOSE SOMEWHERE.

Belfast, Oct. 4.—Tonight will be the end of Sir Edward Carson's fortnight of reviews and all Ulster will settle down to its "peaceful" drills. The Duke of Abercorn next week will have three hundred men encamped upon his estate of Baroncourt.
The Nationalists, meanwhile, will continue the policy of non-interference ordered by Redmond and his lieutenants immediately after the fatal Derry riots and broken only in occasional unorganized clashes.
Sir Edward Carson and Mr. F. E. Smith intend leaving for London tomorrow. Obviously both are disappointed at some hitch in their plans. They told a score of newspaper men that they expected to be able to make an important announcement at Rathfriland yesterday, but the announcement was not forthcoming. Sir Edward stated in an interview that he was returning to London to resume his law practice, and not for a consultation with Mr. Bonar Law.
The special correspondents who have been following Carson and Smith agree that the scene of the home rule drama will be transferred next week to London, where it is probable that there will be strong influences at work to bring both parties together for a formal discussion. Meanwhile, the offer of Winnipeg Orangemen to drill a regiment five hundred strong has been placarded here in big type: "Canada offers help." The offer has not yet been discussed by the provisional cabinet, but probably will be on Wednesday.

POLICE HAVE SOLVED THE MURDER MYSTERY

Have Located the Man Who Shot Dog and Threw It Into Harbor.

The mystery of the blood stains found on the G. T. P. dock and the cold storage was cleared up by the police this morning. Constable Bailey and another officer spent a couple of hours dragging the harbor in the vicinity, but without success. After this they went to the cold storage plant, where they made inquiries among the men. Finally they located a man who told them that R. Anderson had come to him to borrow a lantern, saying that he wanted to shoot a dog. Further investigation led to the location of Anderson, who owned up to the shooting. He said the canine was badly diseased and had to be destroyed. In company with another man, Anderson took the dog up the right-of-way, tied it to a stone, shot it and threw it into the harbor.
Angus Stewart, railway contractor, returned from the south this morning.
