OUTDOORS... with MARTY

Nobody knows how many hundreds of years the various salmons have entered the streams of our province from the ocean. We hear old tales of the silver horde, of rivers choked bank to bank, of eagles, bears and what have you all feeding on the dead and dying fish which had finally run the gauntlet of seals and blackfish.

Yet within the memory of living man we have seen this wonderful fight for procreation dwindle to a comparative trickle of fish, and now we learn of efforts to dam even more of the few remaining natural spawning streams.

Scientists have satisfied themselves that there can be no long survival of the salmons with many more dams being built.

It is a simple thing to spot the large adult fish approaching a dam, his passage upstream is watched for many miles, and he is easy to transport by truck past a high dam, to lead into a fish ladder past a lesser height and to generally care for until the eggs are deposited.

But who knows just when the small cloud of resultant fry, or the tiny school of fingerlings is coming downstream on the way to the ocean?

Even now there is no known way of guaranteeing a reasonable survival of these tender young.

Turbines in power dams will kill many of them, but the spillway itself, even when covered with a soft, slimy growth of algae will account for more than half.

Now since we are dealing with a natural thing that has gone in for so many years, and are now trying to utilize fish water for the power that is vital to the continued growth of our country, surely it is possible to wait a very little longer for the atomic power which is already at work in certain submarines. Why Not?

More proof of the value of the predator control poisoning program so unobtrusively carried out duhing the winter. Bob Froubister counted no less than ten very nonchalant deer feeding along the road between town and Oliver Lake early on Monday morning.

An excellent sign for future nearby hunting, for these animals will quickly build up to a shootable herd that will overflow to the mainland where they are legal game.

Just protect them here on Kaien Island, and remember that they will stand for snapshots if one goes slowly, and remains in the car.

✦ ✦ ✦

Prince Rupert is most fortunate in its geographic location, since it is given sights of creatures not usually seen by city folk. The latest is an obviously mated pair of snow geese that made a temporary abode in the over the weekend.

The gander wears a leg band and his partial tameness induced the pair to stand for photographs at thirty foot range.

Yours truly made slides of these birds in various attitudes and in flight.

Tona Lake, one of the string of small ponds alongside the road between Prudhomme and Rainbow, is now giving up good catches of cutthroats.

Oldtimers Emil and Leon Blain have a cabin here and gravel dump atop Acropolis Hill named this water for Tona Blain Armstrong in order to keep an angler in the family—ask Bob.

✦ ✦ ✦

Fred Russell, working a Norse Lure as a jig in nine fathoms the other day, spent ninety minutes landing an inquisitive 35 pound red spring salmon that simply had to have a look. Nice fishing and nice eating.

✦ ✦ ✦

Those who intend fishing the larger interior lakes this summer should take some deep water tackle and salmon lures of six or more inches in the kit.

Trolled slow and deep, these spoons will account for heavy char and an occasional rainbow of better than ten pounds; char fight deep, but the rainbow will surface immediately after feeling the hook.

✦ ✦ ✦

Sport fishing in the Exchamsiks has fallen of considerably of late. Now that it is being used so very much more, a worthy project for our Rod and Gun Clubsters would be the establishment of a trout run on the pattern of that which now proves so valuable in the Kloyah.

How Hank Puts Beef Into Hits

MILWAUKEE (CP)—In the fifth inning of Tuesday's Milwaukee-Brooklyn game, the Braves' Henry Aaron belted a changeup pitch by loser Don Newcombe to the centrefield fence for a double. It was his second hit off Newk.

With time still "in" the hulking Newcombe ambled off the mound to within about 10 feet of the bag where Aaron was standing.

"Oh, oh," said the boys in the pressbox, "looks like the dusters will be flying now."

"Naw," said Aaron afterward. "All he said to me was 'What's your wife feeding you?' I said 'steak' and he said 'How does she fix it?' 'With onion,' I said."

Was that all that was said? "Aw, no," Aaron added. "he said, 'Where do I got to pitch you Henry, under the plate?'"

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates picked up Robert Gilchrist Smith, 27-year-old rookie lefthander, from the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday.
