UBC SPEAKERS COMING

Booth students to hear about university life

Booth Memorial High School students will be encouraged to learn more about university life and courses available to them, Monday afternoon when two members of the faculty of the University of British Columbia address the student body at 3:30 p.m.

To speak, on behalf of the annual UBC spring touring program, will be Dr. M. W. Steinberg, of the department of English.

The speakers will point out to students the rewards gained by furthering their education at the university.

Aims of the talks are:

● To bring to the attention of high school students the advantages of taking their formal education beyond the high school level if they have the ability to benefit by such further training.

● To ecquaint students with the types of training available at UBC and the duration of courses.

● To present a realistic picture of university life and of the costs of attendance.

● To acquaint students with the means available, where needed, to help pay the costs of attending university.

● To make known the services of such campus agencies as the Counselling Service, the Housing Administrator and the Dean of Women's Office.

● To make the University a less remote and formidable place in the minds of the students by presenting two professors in person.

Parents who are interested in discussing any question of this type with the two visitors are invited to attend the meeting in the school.

Also in attendance will be H. C. Gilliland, director of teacher education at Victoria College, Victoria, B.C.

WEEKLY SERMON

By JOYCE M. FACEY

"When thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." Matthew 6:3

There are some people who want everything they do well advertised. If they give money to some good cause, they want to have it noticed in the papers. If they are kind to the poor or relieve some case of distress they are particular that the matter should be duly published. They take pains that their charities shall not fail to be credited to themselves.

But this is not the kind of spirit that our Lord enjoined on His disciples. He told them that publicity marred the beauty of their alms-giving; that instead of announcing to all men what they had done, they should not even let their left hand know that their right hand had been doing commendable things.

Of course Christ did not mean that we should not be good before people — that we should never give alm save where the act would be absolutely secret. It was the motive that Christ was enforcing. His disciples should never give for the sake of men's praise.

Religious acts instantly loose all their value when any motive but the honor of God and the desire of His approval is in our heart. We should not even ourselves think about our charities, but should forget them as the tree forgets the fruit is drops. We should train ourselves therefore to do our good deeds without seeking praise or recognition of men. We should not be so anxious to have our card tacked on every gift we send. We ought to be willing to do good and let Christ have the glory, while we stay back unknown and unrecognized.

Florence Nightingale, having gone like an angel of mercy among the hospitals in the Crimea until her name was enshrined in every soldier's heart, asked to be excused from having her picture taken, that she might be forgotten, and that Christ alone might be remembered as the author of all the blessings that her hand had distributed.

MEALTIME SALADS

Kitchen fare

Favorite tuna salad is a main course. Hearty enough to satisfy male appetites, seafood salads are a refreshing treat for one and all.

In tuna salads you generally rely on the dressing for flavor. But in this one, we have used shreded cucumber for added flavor enjoyment. And the arrangement of your salad plays an important part, too. We have added peeled tomato wedges for color contrast.

When attractively served and carefully prepared, you'll find sturdy seafood salads high on the list of family-approved main dishes.

FAVORITE TUNA SALAD

17¾ oz. can tuna, drained flaked
½ cup well drained shredded unpeeled cucumber
1 cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon grated onion
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
¼ cup salad dressing
Lettuce
Peeled tomato wedges

Combine the tuna, cucumber, celery, onion and seasonings. Add salad dressing and toss lightly until well blended. Serve on lettuce on individual salad plates. Garnish each salad with two tomato wedges.
