Five-pin League bowlers collect Christmas birds

It was turkey night, Monday in the Men's Five-pin Bowling league, and individually scores were higher than usual as play came to a close until the end of the holiday season.

In A league, Alec Slater, lead-off man for Malkins, won his bird by rolling high single game of 335 while Al Duffus of Esso Fuel Service bowled high triple of 783 for a turkey also.

Hidden score of 160 was rolled by Stan White of Malkins and Ray Giordano of Howe and McNulty, with Giordano winning the toss.

Cooks Jewellers captured team high single with a neat 1099 and Neal Evans amassed 3167 to take high three honors.

Cooks Jewellers, Neal Evans, Esso Fuel Service and Howe and McNulty walked away with 4-0 win.

Cooks downed Grotto Cigar Store to move into sole possession of first place. It was their first clean sweep over Grotto in three years.

Howe and McNulty dropped Port Edward Paramounts to second place with a 4-0 trimming and Esso Fuel Service moved up to fourth place, upsetting Skeena Beverages 4-0.

Neal Evans moved into a seventh place tie with Malkins by hammering Electricians 4-0, dropping the electric men to eighth place, their lowest spot yet.

Malkins gave Old Empress Hotel luckies a point, while they took three. Empress Hotel still find themselves in last place.

In B League, turkey winners were Joe Rageot of Post Office with high single game of 305, while Co-Op's anchor man Doug Thompson took high three with 728.

Charlie Anderson of Legion rolled the hidden score of 147.

Spero's Food Market bowled high single and triple with 1096, while their 2971 total set a new season high, bettering the old mark set by Bulgers last week by 14 pins.

The fight for leadership in B League continues. Legion once again rolled into first place with a 3-1 win over Rupert Radio.

Babcock Fisheries dropped Bulgers to second place with a 3-1 win while Spero's came to life edging Co-Op Hy-Waves 3-1 and Co-Op winning the second game by a mere six pins.

Kelly Douglas trimmed Tony's Drive-In 3-1, and Post Office scored the only clean sweep for the night, a 4-0 victory over their close rivals Stromdahl's Service.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

With Mrs. Fusty, the old whist player, in the game, a different atmosphere prevailed. Always courteous, but always grim, too, she keeps things moving. She gives no quarter and asks none.

Any attempt to start a post-mortem of a hand or to criticize a partner is squelched with a cold stare and an inquiry as to whose deal it is. It becomes clear that when Mrs. Fusty sits down at the table she has only one thing in mind—to play bridge. (Modern players please copy.)

This was the second deal of the rubber. On the first deal Mrs. Fusty had made a fine defensive play involving the king of clubs. Again today the club suit was the key to the contract.

Mr. Heinsite, led the ten of hearts and dummy's queen won. At trick two Mr. Dale led a small club from the the board and it looked as if he had got the favorable break he had hoped for when Mrs. Fusty promptly played the king. Actually he had got the worst possible "break" because her play was the only one to beat the contract.

Mrs. Fusty

After winning with the ace of clubs, Mr. Dale led a small club toward the jack and Mr. Heinsite won with the queen. Now it was up to the spade finesse and when that lost, the hand was down one.

Sadly, Mr. Dale contemplated what could have happened if Mrs. Fusty had not gone up with the king of clubs at trick two. He could have won with the ace and cashed all of his red suit winners.

A club lead then would have put Mrs. Fusty in and her forced spade return would have eliminated the loser in that suit and made the contract.

Mrs. Fusty's unblocking play at trick two was particularly remarkable because she was the need for it so early in the hand, before anybody knew much about the layout of the cards.

"I don't know yet how well she plays the other 51 cards," thought Mr. Dale, "but she is undoubtedly the finest player of the king of clubs in the entire world."

Santa coming

at the time and be back at the Civic Centre by 1:30 p.m."

"How long do you stay at the Civic Centre, then?" I asked, reaching for my second cup of coffee.

"I stay until 4:30 that afternoon, by which time I hope to have seen all the boys and girls in Prince Rupert who believe in Santa Claus."

"Can all children come and see you?"

"Of course," Santa insisted." "Any boy or girl can come and see me, they don't have to belong to the Civic Centre or anything. I want to see all the children I can. I saw about 1,200 last year."

"Do they do anything except see you and tell you what they want for Christmas?"

"Certainly they do. They receive little gifts which several merchants in Prince Rupert help me with. There'll be gifts for everyone."

"Tell me, Santa," I said, "what about children who maybe sick at home or unable to come down to the Civic Centre to see you?"

"That's up to their mothers and dads," Santa said. "If they want me to come and visit them while I'm in Prince Rupert next Saturday, then all their mothers and dads have to do is to telephone 4226, tell me their name, address and age and make an appointment. I'll pay them a visit after 4 p.m. Saturday."

"Well, bully for you," I said. Then I noticed that an Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., craft was landing on the snow near Santa's home.

"I've got to go," I said. "It was easy getting here but it takes Okanagan Helicopters, Ellis Airlines, B.C. Airlines and Pacific Western Airlines to get me back."

"I'll stick to my sleigh," Santa said.

"Well thanks for the coffee and I'll see you in the Civic Centre Saturday," I told St. Nick.

"I'll be there," Santa said adding "I'll be back Christmas Eve too."

"Don't forget me, then," I laughed.

"Oh, I've got you on my list," Santa replied, "it was Marilyn Monroe you wanted in your stocking, wasn't it?"

"I'll settle for Brigitte Bardot," I shouted as I went out into the polar ice and snow to be whisked back to Prince Rupert.
