Chinese Communists Face Struggle With 'Rightists'

By DON DALLAS

LONDON (Reuters)— Leaders of the Chinese Communist party are engaged in a "life and death struggle" with a powerful group of "bourgeois rightists." They spurn unity with Russia, denounced "Red imperialism" and want to establish a "bourgeois democracy," a Chinese leader disclosed in a speech in Peiping Thursday.

Propaganda chief Lu Ting-yi outlined the struggle in a speech to the National People's Congress legislature in Peiping. He said the rightists have come forward, "boldly wagging their tails and unleashing a ferocious attack."

His speech, reported by the New China news agency and monitored here, said that a "handful of bourgeois rightists" oppose the "socialist road" for China. But Lu said the group should not be underestimated.

He said: "They have property and knowledge, and to a certain extent possess the ability to manage and organize. They are connected with international and domestic reactionaries in a great many ways and are experienced in political and even armed struggle.

"Therefore it is certain that there will still be a long-term class struggle in our country and this struggle will sometimes assume a very acute form."

Lu said the bourgeois rightists declared they themselves support socialism and were sincere and well-intentioned, but only opposed leadership by the Communist party. They wanted "bourgeois democracy."

Lu declared that in a recent campaign they launched, the "rightists" got support from at most one to three per cent of the students in the institutions of higher education and "a few per cent" of the higher intellectuals. But most of this following has forsaken them.

Now, he said, the Chinese people understand that "opposition to the Communist party is treason and means the ruin of the country and a great calamity for the nation."

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)— Augustin Suarez Navarro at 18 has graduated from the University of Cordoba to become the youngest doctor in Argentina. He started school at four and finished high school at 12. He has been offered a post-graduate scholarship at the University of Buenos Aires.

Women Champions Win Right To "Sound Off" About Men

By Jeanne Smith, Dodge Safety Consultant

WOMEN DRIVERS STRUCK A SOLID BLOW in their own defense recently when nine capable young feminine drivers walked off with a lioness' share of the winnings in the annual Mobilgas Economy Run.

The gals, most of them housewives, came within five one-hundredths of a ton mile of giving the 14 male drivers a lesson in accelerator tactics. They won first place, as well as some second and third places, with an overall ton mileage of 52.0111. The men's average was 52,0609 ton miles.

Miss Smith

In actual miles per gallon, the men shaded the women by about two large drops of gaseline with 20.6461 miles per gallon against the distaff record of 20.2382.

After the final results were tabulated, the champion women drivers of the country finally had a chance to retaliate and gripe about "the man driver" for a change. With glee, they made out this list of complaints about him.

1. He frequently leans on the horn to clear the street of all cars except his.
2. He races his motor to waste gas and strain the engine—and to summon his wife out of the house.
3. He stores pipe cleaners, empty matchbooks, fish hooks and gasoline receipts in the glove compartment.
4. He punches the dials on the radio as if it were a typewriter.
5. He rocks white wall tires against the curb when parking—especially if it's been a bad day.
6. He uses strong language to criticize other drivers for trivial offenses he commits every day.
7. He makes a marvelous impression passing another car at 70 miles per hour, and then rests on his laurels at 50 mph or less.
8. He tells a woman driver that she doesn't know a valve from a piston — but neither does he.

Most of all, he doesn't think women are good drivers. Or, rather, he didn't before the revolutionary results of this year's Mobilgas Economy Run!
