Hinton gets award

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions guard Tommy Hinton was named the club's rookie of the year by members of the press and radio.

The six-foot, 235-pounder came to the Lions from Louisiana Tech Bulldogs, where he was tackle and team captain.

Hinton played guard, tackle and defensive end through Lions' tough season in the Western Interprovincial Football Union and went nearly 60 minutes every game.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

There is no greater bridge torture than that suffered by the powerless dummy player who has to watch his partner play trick after trick in the plain suits while there are still four or five trumps outstanding.

Although many a contract is lost by reason of the declarer's failure to pull trumps at his first opportunity, it is not sensible to say that this action should be taken on every hand. Sometimes you cannot afford to touch the trump suit until fairly late in the play and you simply must take the chance of getting something ruffed by a defender.

Mr. Masters

In today's deal Mr. Masters figured that if he tried to pick up the opposing trumps early in the hand, he would have no chance at all for his contract. The line of play he adopted was based on the eminently sound concept that half a chance is better than none.

He got the queen of spades opening and won in his hand with the king. He was off three aces and therefore it was obvious that the loss of a spade trick would break the contract.

If he led a trump at trick two, one of the defenders would win with the ace and undoubtedly return a spade to knock out the last stopper in that suit. Mr. Masters could then pick up the other outstanding trumps but the enemy would still have both of the minor suit aces to gain the lead and cash a spade.

The only way to get rid of the spade loser was to discard it on dummy's club suit. Time was the most important element. The clubs had to be established before the last spade stopper was gone. So at trick two Mr. Masters led the king of clubs. Mr. Dale won with the ace and returned the 10 of spades. But dummy's ace won and the spade loser from the closed hand went off on the third round of clubs.

Now finally, at trick six, Mr. Masters could afford to lead trumps. His queen lost to the ace and he ruffed the spade return, picked up the remaining trumps and conceded one more trick, a diamond.

12 trapped men

crews have spent whole shift digging out a single body.

Mechanical equipment cannot be used in the rescue areas. Sparks might strike an unknown pocket of gas. Miners are able to work only on their stomachs. Their shovel handles are broken off to facilitate digging. In some places floors and walls of the passageways are only 10 inches apart. Once there was 10 feet between them.

CAUTIOUS WORK

Every foot of the way crews stop to shore up the walls and celings to prevent a further collapse of the weakened tunnels and more fatalities in the death-filled pit.

Everything here Wednesday night was secondary to the rescue of the 12 men. The future encompassed only the few hours until they were brought above ground.
