Blackwood on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

In the past few columns I have outlined a number of situations where you should not return your partner's lead, after winning the first trick.

Remember these are exceptions. Often, and especially against no trump contracts, returning partner's suit is exactly the right thing to do.

But never do it blindly. Always consider the bidding and the looks of the dummy—then use your best judgment.

Here is another hand in which the return of partner's opening lead would have been distastrous. Mr. Masters led the queen of clubs against the four-spade contract. Mr. Champion won with the ace and searched for some line of play which would net his side four tricks.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	All Pass

He knew Mr. Masters's clubs were headed by the queen and jack. If Mr. Masters had held the king of clubs as well, he would have led it. Therefore, the king was in the closed hand and a club return was hopeless.

Going back over the bidding, Mr. Champion considered with interest the fact that Mr. Abel had raised his partner's diamonds and so must have at least three cards in that suit. Mr. Masters then could have no more than two. It was unlikely that he held a singleton, since he probably would have chosen that for his opening lead.

So Mr. Champion hoped his partner had a stopper in the trump suit and that he could ruff a third round of diamonds.

Further reasoning told him he must lead a low diamond at trick two—not the ace. The ace had to be retained as the only entry to the East hand after Mr. Masters won his hoped-for trump trick.

This good reasoning got its just reward. Mr. Abel won the second trick with dummy's 10 of diamonds and led a spade. Mr. Masters won with the ace of trumps and returned his last diamond. Mr. Champion took the ace and led another diamond for his partner to ruff. Down one.
