General Sutton from Vancouver B.C. Would Develop Peace Lands

Latest Scheme Is to Build Log Cabin Villages for 100 Families and Teach Immigrants Farming

LONDON, Aug. 24.—F. P. Sutton of Vancouver has given the Daily Chronicle some particulars of a scheme for development of the Peace River whereby he plans to establish a chain of log cabin villages with electric lights, water supply, club stores and picture shows.

Under the proposed scheme each village is to comprise 100 houses, surrounded each by four acres of land, and the villages themselves to be surrounded by a square block of 16,000 acres or 100 quarter sections. The settlement would also be surrounded by another belt of 15,000 acres to be available for further development.

In the first year the immigrants are to be taught to build their own cabins and work the adjoining four acres with a personal allowance of a dollar a day for food.

In the second year they will begin farming their respective quarter sections outside the villages.

KELLOGG PACT ONLY GESTURE BUT VALUABLE

(Winnipeg Free Press)

It is now pretty generally recognized throughout the world that the Kellogg pact, even if it was only a gesture, as charged by its critics, is an influence for world peace. That it has had a good deal to do with reducing the danger of war as an outcome of the Russo-Chinese difficulty seems to be a matter of general agreement. The criticism of the pact arises from the absence of sanctions. If the Kellogg pact stood alone, as the sole instrument of its kind, this criticism would be more cogent than it is when the fact is borne in mind that the Covenant of the League contains the provisions which are missing from the pact. The Kellogg treaty is, in fact, a reinsurance of the Covenant, giving the assurance of a world-wide moral support to the League if it is driven to apply sanctions to nations bent on breaking the peace of the world; it is in this respect that the pact has made a contribution of value to the cause of world peace.

Battalion Being Despatched to Palestine From Egypt to Stop Trouble

LONDON, Aug. 24:—The Admiralty announced yesterday that the British warships Barham and Sussex were sailing from Malta to Palestine today at the request of the British High Commissioner, following further outbreaks between Jews and Arabs in Jerusalem. Last night nine Jews and three Arabs were killed and 100 other persons injured. All shops are closed.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Aug. 24:—It is understood here that a battalion of troops are being despatched to Palestine in connection with rioting about the "Wailing Wall" of Jerusalem.

LONLON, Aug. 24:—Martial law has been proclaimed at Jerusalem with strict censorship of news. Latest reports stated that 18 Arabs and 11 Jews were killed yesterday and scores injured.

The power yacht Sueja III, belonging to Capt. Griffiths of Seattle, went on the pontoons at the local dry dock this morning for minor propeller repairs and will probably go off again tonight when she will resume her cruise from Seattle to Anvox and Stewart.

Contenders in Great Swimming Race

1. Miss Catherine Harrop of Seattle, who was a favorite, but was not mentioned in the despatches; 2. Miss Ruth Towers, who won second place; 3. Miss Olive Gatterdam of Seattle, who came in second last year and was forced to quit this year in the sixth mile; 4. Miss Ethel Hartle of the Bronx, New York, who won last year, but this time was not a serious contender.

Britain Issues Ultimatum to Other Allied Powers at Hague That Her Patience is Exhausted

THE HAGUE, Aug. 24.—In a letter to Premier Jaspar of Belgium published today, Rt. Hon. Phillip Snowden declared the British delegation had exhausted all the patience at its command in debating Britain's demand for a larger share in the Young reparations and stated that there must be a final decision one way or the other immediately.

Snowden cut short conversations with the allies who were counting on concessions by Germany to make possible an increase in the British share, after making clear that Britain had no desire to have her demands satisfied by further sacrifices on the part of Germany.

RECEPTION TO COLONEL BLAIR

Crowds Turn Out at Vancouver to Welcome Winner of King's Prize

VANCOUVER, Aug. 24.—Colonel Blair arrived home this afternoon and was greeted by his family at Coquitlam. He motored from there to Vancouver, where he was tendered a gala reception at Cambie Street grounds and "chaired" in true Bisley style. Afterwards a monster procession moved to Stanley Park, where Mayor Malkin extended a civic welcome and presented him with a silver tea service.

Bishop G. A. Rix left on this morning's train for a trip to Burns Lake on ecclesiastical duties.

NAVAL PARITY NOT ACCEPTABLE

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill Dilates Upon British Navy at Banquet

EDMONTON, Aug. 24—Speaking at a civic banquet in his honor here yesterday, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer in the British cabinet, declared Great Britain sought nothing but peace in the world.

Referring to naval discussions with the United States, Mr. Churchill said he would urge his countrymen to never put their hand to a treaty that would bind Great Britain to a rigid naval parity with any power in the world.

"If we cannot agree, then let us disagree, but not build more than we require," Mr. Churchill said. He declared that the British navy had been aggressive against none and had proved a sure shield of Liberty during the great war.

A charge against Matt Videck of assaulting a police officer was withdrawn in city police court yesterday afternoon. A charge of keeping liquor for sale was adjourned until August 28.

BOARD OF TRADE PRESIDENT IS DISAPPOINTED

President Milton Gonzales of the Board of Trade, expressed disappointment that more delegates were not going to the Peace River to represent Prince Rupert. He urged that even yet there might be local people who could find it possible to make the trip, part of their expenses being paid by the Board of Trade.

Watt Dismissal Again Aired by Secretary of Veterans at Meeting

Robert Macnicol Addressed Members of Canadian Legion at Meeting in Their Rooms Last Night

"Your provincial office has been somewhat concerned over the dismissal of N. Watt, government agent at Prince Rupert, especially when we have received protests from Conservatives as well as others in the community," said Robert Macnicol, executive secretary for the Canadian Legion in British Columbia, in addressing the local branch at a meeting last night. "Every civil servant is entitled to 'British justice, and I do not think the Legion should rest satisfied until its officers have had the opportunity of perusing the evidence which the government states that it has on file concerning this dismissal. In some other cases we have generally found that such evidence consists of written complaints from some "party heeler" who is looking for the job of the person he is complaining about and. therefore, evidence of this kind is prejudiced and should not be accepted. In order that the Canadian Legion should be able to express an opinion upon the Watt dismissal, the government should not hesitate to produce the documentary evidence they are supposed to have on file and if such evidence is found inconclusive the charges that Mr. Watt, a disabled veteran, played politics should be withdrawn. I do not see how the Canadian Legion can let this complaint rest where it is and propose to recommend that the government be requested to produce the written evidence for inspection by our provincial president, Colonel Foster.

"On matters affecting employment of veterans by the federal and provincial governments, I feel that, irrespective of party politics, we veterans must put up a solid front and insist upon fair treatment of veterans by our governing bodies. Party politics did not enter into our efforts overseas and there should only be two qualifications for employment of veterans in the service of the provincial or Dominion government: The necessary army or navy service and ability to fill the position. Provincially, I have found a ten-

Women's Ten-Mile Marathon Swim at Toronto Proved to be Great Race---Conditions Ideal

TORONTO, Aug. 24. — The time of Miss Martha Norelius, winner of the big women's Wrigley marathon yesterday, was 5 hours 23 minutes for the ten-mile course. That was better by twelve minutes than the time of Miss Ethel Hertle last year. Miss Norelius gets the $10,000 prize.

Miss Ruth Towers, who came in second in 5 hours 31 minutes, won the $3000 prize. She put up a wonderful struggle until near the finish when Miss Norelius outdistanced her.

The third prize went to Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong of Detroit, who receives a check for $1000 for her efforts. She was forty minutes behind the winner.

Miss Olive Gatterdam of Seattle, who finished second last year, was forced to quit in the sixth mile, exhausted.

Last year's winner, Miss Ethel Hertle, was never a real contender yesterday.

Racing conditions were ideal.

The men's fifteen-mile Wrigley marathon is billed to take place next Wednesday.

Sockeye Salmon Pack is Well Ahead of Last Year but Total Quantity of Salmon Put Up Less

With the Naas River, Rivers Inlet and Smith's Inlet areas having concluded canning operations for the season, a few canneries in the Skeena River and central division remaining open to pack fall fish, and canning just commencing on the Queen Charlotte Islands, the total salmon pack in District No. 2, of which Prince Rupert is the centre, up to the middle of August this year is estimated at 426,616 cases, as against 588,569 cases at a similar date last year. The sockeye pack in all areas except Smith's Inlet is far ahead of last year and the fact that it has been an off year for pinks may be taken as the principal factor in accounting for this year's lessened total pack. All areas in the district show a lower total pack than last year.

After being closed for 10 days, fishing with 5¾ inch mesh nets will again be permissable in the Skeena River and Naas River tomorrow. Seining is over in these two areas for the year but will be continued in other areas.

Canneries remaining open for packing of fall fish are:

DIFFICULTY REGARD TO NAMES

There is a good deal of difficulty in regard to place names in British Columbia. Mostly this is due to the spelling of Indian names, but also it grows out of the collision between the names of stations and post offices or villages and schools. Take the example of Terrace. The incorporated village is Terrace, the school is Kitsum Kalum, the river Kitsumkalum and the lake which it drains is usually spoken of as Kalum Lake, while the word Kitsumgallum seems to be interchangeable with any of the others. Now, forgetting the historical significance of these matters and dealing with them from a utility standpoint, we have the following suggestions to make:

Have the name of the school changed to Terrace.

Call the river Kitsumkalum.

Rename the lake Kalum Lake.

We suggest this action to the Terrace Board of Trade and village council and shall use those names in this paper until it is officially decided otherwise. Everyone knows Terrace, which is a suitable name based on the natural terraces which are so picturesque at the interior village. Usage has named the Lake Kalum and the river might well perpetuate the old Indian name. It seems to vary on the different maps between Kitsumkalum and Kitsumgallum. The department of education is already using the name Terrace in connection with school appointments and other matters and the official name should be corrected at once. In a news article today we have used "Kitsumkalum," which is correct, instead of "Terrace," which is incorrect, and as a result most of the readers of this paper will wonder where the place is. If we said "Terrace" they would know immediately.

NATIONAL VIEWPOINT

Fred Kergin when discussing university life before the Rotary Club on Thursday spoke of getting the national viewpoint in place of the home town viewpoint. He might even have carried it further and mentioned the desirability of getting a world viewpoint in place of a purely national viewpoint.

Insularity is one of the things we have to fight against in Prince Rupert. We are to some extent cut off from the rest of the world and we are apt to get restricted in our outlook. We see nothing much beyond our own home town. While the local newspapers try their best to give a smattering of world news, the possibilities along this line are limited. We meet chiefly our near neighbors and seldom discuss questions of more than local interest. Then when we get a spell of inclement weather we tend to become morose and selfcentred.

To overcome this we suggest a course of wide reading, including Canadian, British and American periodicals. A radio is also a means of keeping in touch with the outside, particularly in musical matters. Study clubs, reading clubs and similar groups are very useful. They are a great improvement on bridge clubs. Frequent visits to the outside and the hearing of addresses by prominent people such as those fostered by the Women's Canadian Club have a good effect.

As Prince Rupert develops she will tend to become more national in her interests and the matter will right itself.

Politics is largely a matter of oratory and sentiment. Eliminate both and only business remains.

Halibut Landings Away in Excess of Last Year With Canadian Also Ahead Now; New Cold Storage Plant; New Facilities at Digby Island

Halibut landings at the port of Prince Rupert for the 1929 season to date are now well over one million pounds in excess of the record for 1928, this year's landings now aggregating 19,011,350 pounds, as compared with last year's 17,845,800 pounds at a similar date. The increase is mainly due to greater volume of American landings, which now amount to a total of 13,259,500 pounds, as against last year's 12,169,400 pounds. After lagging behind Canadian landings, however, have also jumped ahead to a total of 5,751,850 pounds, as compared with 5,674,400 pounds.

During the past week landings amounted to 811,800 pounds, of which 312,000 pounds was from Canadian boats and 499,800 pounds from American. Throughout the week prices paid for Canadian fish compared very favorably with that offered American. The high price of the week for Canadian fish was 15.5c. and 8c paid the Kaien for 9000 pounds, while the top American bid was 15c and 8c which the Tatoosh received for 16,000 pounds. Low bids of the week were 11.6c and 7c for Canadian fish and 12.4c and 8c for American.

Humpback Bay Open

The Chatham Sound Packing Co.'s cannery at Humpback Bay, Porcher Island, is one of the few packing plants in the Skeena River area which is remaining open to put up fall varieties. Though this is the first season it has been in operation, the Humpback Bay cannery already has a very satisfactory pack.

A San Pedro naval architect has under way plans for a new 180-foot steel motor yacht for Capt. G. Allan Hancock, Los Angeles millionaire yachtsman, who is well known at this port. The craft is to have lines similar to those of a navy destroyer. She will have a cruising radius of 10,000 miles at a speed of fourteen knots.

Captain Hancock is the owner of the 125-foot motor yacht Velerno II., aboard which he recently completed a cruise to Alaska from Los Angeles harbor, calling here. He formerly owned the steamer Oaxaca, now owned by Captain J. W Hobbs of Vancouver.

With the new craft the owner will make frequent trips to his properties on the west coast of Mexico. He also plans to use the boat for several scientific expeditions. Two years ago he sent his Oaxaca out on a lengthy cruise to the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador, to make scientific observations.

John Curie & Son, Prince Rupert contractors, have been awarded the construction of a marine ways warehouse and living quarters on Digby Island, near the marine station, for the department of marine and fisheries. The plant will be for the use of fisheries patrol vessels of the department, particularly as winter quarters. The work will be commenced immediately and it is expected to be completed in about two months' time. Several Prince Rupert contractors bid on the job.

Yacht model owners of Prince Rupert and other persons who may be interested will foregather in the Canadian Legion club rooms tonight to organize an association Officers will be elected and rules and regulations for yacht model racing here will also be laid down and classifications arranged for. The meeting follows a yacht model race about a month ago in which much interest was manifested

Back From Vancouver

Kenny Rood's power cruiser Ragnhild is back in its berth at the Pacific Salvage Co.'s floats after a trip down the coast as far as Vancouver. The Ragnhild returned to port about a week ago.

Following announcement of the project this week, there has been considerable speculation as to just where in Cow Bay the Aivazoff interests may intend the erection of their cold storage undertaking. As far as the most of the present lesees in Cow Bay are concerned, tenure for years has been more or less of an uncertain hand-to-mouth quantity with the possibility of eviction at almost any time. The probability is that some of the present occupants of Cow Bay waterfront may be affected by the proposed new undertaking, which, judging from such meagre information as is already available, may eventualy become a rather important industry.

Mil Nickerson, popular manager of F. E. Hunt, Ltd., who left July 1 on a motor tour to Banff and the northwestern states, is looked for to be back on the job by the first of next month or very soon after. While the boys say they are getting along nicely without him, it is plain to see they are pining for his company more and more every day.

Pacific Salvage Co.'s power tug Pachena returned to port on Monday after completing a two months charter to the Skeena River Packing Co.'s Port Edward cannery. The Salvage Princess is now packing pilchards on the west coast of Vancouver Island and is not expected to return to Prince Rupert before well on into October.

The B. C. Packers fish packer B. H. 2, which has been on the Skeena River during the summer, left Thursday morning for South Bay and will be attached to that cannery for the fall fishing.

This very unpleasant summer from the weather standpoint has seriously hampered the operations of the local amateur boatsmen and it looks like the curtain is going to ring down on the season this year before it gets started. Some of the boats, indeed, have hardly been away from their berths since spring. However, Shef Thomson has been faithfully on the job, neither wet or dry weather interfering with his daily trick with the pumps. The next stop in local yachting circles will be the opening of the hunting season next week and it is to be hoped the weather will be more auspicious for the nimrods than it has been for the would-be picnickers.

With the closing down to a large extent of salmon fishing and canning on the Skeena River, many natives of the Queen Charlotte Islands have been in port during the past week in the course of their return to their homes across Hecate Straits. Many of the native boats will engage in fall fishing on the islands before commencing to hibernate.

Norman Moorehouse, second in command of the W. R. Love electric shop, is spending a holiday in Vancouver, having left last week-end for the south to bask in the bright lights for the next few days, and, incidentally, help the Vancouverites to inhale some of their smoke nuisance. Billy Brooksbank is latest acquisition to the staff of the Love shop and he is reported to be liking it so well that he may stay on, provided he doesn't get the air before he has a chance to.

Under charter to a Dominion government field mining engineer whose particular quest is lime rock, power cruiser Bonanza, with Skipper Harry Ward in personal charge, left a few days ago for an extended cruise down the coast as far as Powell River. The plan is to make stops at many of the coast islands in the course of the cruise.

A severe compound fracture of the leg was sustained last Sunday morning aboard the Chatham Sound Packing Co.'s cannery tender Carlisle L by Elbert Hogan, one of the members of the crew. Hogan was oiling up the engine when his leg became caught in the flywheel and went around at least three times, being frightfully mangled and lacerated. At that, the unfortunate man still had presence of mind enough to turn off the power and shut the engine down as soon as possible. He was rushed back to the city to be placed in hospital, where he is reported to be getting along as nicely as can be expected, although it is doubtful if he will ever regain full use of the terribly injured member.

Halibut

(By J. P. Babcock)

Halibut mature in their eleventh year, though a small percentage has been recorded at eight. Halibut of forty years of age have been recorded. The growth of the halibut is slow, and they grow faster on southern banks than on the more northerly. On the Massett banks fish nine years old have a length of seventy centimetres, while the seventy centimetre length fish on Shumagin banks are in their eleventh year.

There is also a great difference in the weight attained by the females and the males. Females weighing upward of 400 pounds have been taken. From 100 pounds upwards the fishermen term the females "whales." The largest females produce as many as 5,000,000 eggs. The mature males are much smaller than the females. They do not attain a weight much over eighty pounds even at thirty years of age.

The study of racial characteristics has been most productive. The fish taken from some banks can be distinctly recognized as characteristics of that section. There is a difference in head, length, body, width. In the Gulf of Alaska the fish on the Yakutat banks show an affinity with those on the Shumagin; and those on the Timbered Island banks, in southeastern Alaska, with those on the Massett banks in British Columbia. It is evident that each bank has its own average rate of growth. When it is remembered that this rate of growth is the net result of between eight and eleven years of life, during which extensive wanderings might have been undertaken by each fish, the difference proves that the individual fish must have remained more or less under the particular types of environment to produce such differences. The difference in the rates of growth on various banks is confirmed by other racial study and by tagging. They too show that the population of the banks differ markedly—consist of races of halibut that can be distinguished one from the other.

Rupert's Rays

(Dedicated to the two fine days experienced in Prince Rupert this year).

Dirty days hath September,
April, June and November,
February's days are quite all right,
(It only rains from morn till night.
All the rest have thirtyone
Without a blessed gleam of sun,
And if any of them had two and thirty,
They'd be just as wet and just as dirty.

Yesterday and Today

Thirty-five years ago the sixth of June last, in a jeweller's shop in a small town across the border, a young U.S. Government clerk, C. Francis Jenkins, using the machine pictured above, which he had just invented, staged the first public exhibition of moving pictures in America.

It remained, however, for the telephone engineer and the scientist, trained in the electrical transmission of sound, to make possible Sound picture equipment.

Apparatus similar in all respects to that which has already been installed by Northern Electric engineers in the leading theatres from coast to coast throughout Canada, has also been placed in the large theatres in England, France, Germany, India, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil, West Indies, Central America, China, Japan and some 2,500 in the United States.

V. STEFANSSON IS LECTURING

WINNIPEG, Aug. 24:—Vilhjalmur Stefansson, famous Arctic explorer, arrived here this morning over the lines of the Canadian National Railways from the east. Mr. Stefansson, while here, will lecture on "The Friendly North" and as he explained, will try to arouse the people of Canada to the vastness of the empire which lies in the north of Canada.

"If the people of Canada would only realize it, the northern air route to Europe is the only practical one to develop," stated Mr. Stefansson. "Within ten years time, one day mail service from Winnipeg to London will be an every day occurance."

Mr. Stefansson went on to say, "there are no arguments against the climate in the north that were not put forward in the controversy which raged when it was first proposed to bridge the prairies by railway, and I believe that in the same length of time it took Winnipeg to gain its potent size here will be cities as far north as Churchill and there will be cities such as Churchill will be in ten years all along the northern coast of Canada."

Accompanying the famous explorer is Karston Anderson, a member of Stefansson's last expedition. To Mr. Anderson goes the honor of having discovered the last discoverable bit of land in the Arctic, Meighen Island, which is now a part of the Dominion of Canada.

ELEVATOR USE THIS WINTER

Nothing Definite Yet Known as to Wheat Pool's Plans For Local House

Though there are many rumors afloat, nothing official is yet available as to what the Alberta Wheat Pool's plans for the use of the local elevator during the coming grain shipping season may be. The hope is that fuller use will be given the plant this year than last.

It will be late in September before any of this year's grain starts to move to the Pacific Coast and, until that time, it is not likely that anything definite as to the operation of the local house will be known.

WANTS PICTURES FOR EXHIBITION IN PEACE COUNTRY NEXT MONTH

The secretary of the Board of Trade has received a letter from Page Rideout, publisher of a Peace River paper, asking for pictures of the elevator at Prince Rupert and also pictures of the port to show the members of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce party when they visit the district next month. These are being forwarded.

Board of Trade officials are pleased at this interest taken in Prince Rupert, which compares favorably, they think, with the local interest in the Chamber of Commerce visit.

INSTALMENT XXIX.

Mummers' Frolic Ends

As if to cheer the pale, lovely girl seated on the frail-limbed Chippendale chair, a flood of glorious sunshine poured through the windows of the castle drawing room.

"How dreadful!" she sighed.

Dale, looking his brightest and freshest, picked up the afternoon paper she had dropped to the floor. A prominent black caption stood out from the general run of news on the front page:

"Arrest of the Mysterious Mr. Graves Promised Within Twenty-four Hours"

Dale ran his calm, gray eyes down the appended column.

"Rot!" he exclaimed.

"But it says the police have definite information which will positively lead to an arrest before tomorrow night."

"Lies!" Dale crumpled the paper and flung it from him. "It is only yellow journalism at its worst. Nothing but insinuation, innuendo and drivel. Not one positive statement in the whole article. I admit Dr. Moffett is clever, though. He has fed a few harmless hints to the authorities, enough for this yellow rag to base a scarehead on. His object is to frighten your father and you, and to convince you that he is ready to go the whole way unless you submit."

"But suppose he should——"

"Look here, Miss Castle. Dr Moffett is flourishing a big gun, but he has only one shot. He isn't going to waste that shot."

She considered, then brightened a little. "I was hoping to hear from you yesterday," she murmured.

"Busy," said Dale laconically.

She smiled faintly. "I thought perhaps you were resting after the big night."

"Oh, the Mummers Frolic. Rather a bore, wasn't it?"

She searched his face. "Not for me. Was it for you?"

"That reminds me. This is my first opportunity to ask you what happened out there on the balcony after I left. Joan of Arc proved to be Dr. Moffett's messenger, I suppose?"

"Oh, you knew that? I didn't suspect anything until she spoke a sentence with the words 'blue' and 'yellow' in it. She almost knocked me over with that sentence."

"No wonder. What happened?"

She looked at hi mas if suspecting that he knew a great deal more than he pretended, but she plunged into her story, finishing at the point where a warning signal had been flashed to her companion on the balcony.

"I'm afraid I didn't carry it off very well," she concluded.

"You did splendidly," Dale assured her. "Did you know the papers were forgeries, or was it only a bluff?"

"Only a bluff."

"Well, it was a good one, and it happened to be true."

She looked a little startled. "Then the papers were forgeries?"

"They were copies," said Dale. "Dr. Moffett meant to keep the originals for future use."

The dark look in her face showed that she understood.

"What a blackguard he is!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, all of that," said Dale in his softest tones.

She reflected for a moment. "But the signal? What was the meaning of that?"

Briefly Dale explained his own part in the events leading up to the signal, but he omitted the fact that Ainsworth was one of the two men he had found in the room on the thirteenh floor of he Vandermoore. She listened intently, her eyes gradually widening with amazement.

"A dog was to receive the money!" she exclaimed. "What an idea!"

"A rather clever one. After giving the signal, the two men fled from the room very hurriedly. I didn't care so much about them, but what I was curious to know was whether Caesar would have carried the packet of money if one had been dropped. I supposed someone was waiting for him in a car nearby, but that night every block in the neighborhood of the Vandermoore was packed with cars, so it would have been impossible to find the right one. Then I hit upon the idea of having Caesar lead me to it."

She wrinkled her forehead perplexedly

"It was perfectly simple. I merely dropped a package from the window. It was only a couple of newspapers done into a neat bundle, but Caesar couldn't be expected to know. He did his duty like a thoroughbred. Oh, I forgot to tell you. First I saturated the newspapers with ink."

"Oh! she exclaimed after a moment's bewilderment. She laughed a little. "And then you ran down and picked up Caesar's trail."

Dale nodded. "It was lucky I had a trail to follow. The car was parked several blocks away, and I would never have found it without Caesar's assistance. The trail grew fainter and fainter. The papers absorbed some of the ink of course. But I found the car. It was just about to start, and I barely had time to jump into a taxi and follow it." Dale laughed, amusedly. "Wonder what the person in the car thought when Caesar brought him that package."

She gave him a warm glance of approval. "That was clever. Where did you follow the car?" Dale looked suddenly diffident. "To Dr. Moffett's new headquarters." he replied vaguely.

"He had to leave Bank Street, you know, after the excitement the other night"

His tone seemed to puzzle her. "Did you see who was in the car?"

"No, it was too dark, and it drove away too quickly." He paused for a moment. "Any other developments since I saw you last?"

"Mr. Ferryman called yesterday. He appears to be a very kind gentleman. He said he understood his house had been the scene of certain activities that had brought unpleasantness to father and me. Feeling as if he were somehow responsible, he wanted to know if there was anything he could do."

"Generous of him," said Dale. "He can't help us, but the offer shows he has a kind heart. You and I will handle Dr. Moffett, and we'll put a crimp in his scheme before long.

His confident tone made her smile. "You make me forget all my troubles," she told him.

Then, his whimsical gaze lingered on the sun glints in her raven hair, "I am justifying my existence."

"The Picaroon's existence!" she murmured.

He smiled soberly. "It needs a lot of justification. Ask Summers, he knows." He looked at her a little wistfully. "You are a little pale. Why not go out in the sunshine for a while?"

"What about the moonlight? Mr. Ainsworth has asked me to go driving this evening."

"Oh!" It was as if a shadow had suddenly fallen between them. "I don't think Ainsworth likes me."

"He will when he knows you. And you will like him."

Dale groaned inwardly. How splendid she was with her unfaltering faith in the man she loved—how splendid and how blind!

"Poor Paul!" she murmured. "He has had reverses lately—lost a lot of his money. Now he has to economize and I believe he is ashamed of it, though he has no reason to be. It would make no difference to me if the dear boy was down to his last dollar."

"No, it wouldn't—not with a girl like you."

"I know he will get up again," she declared. "He isn't the kind that stays down for long."

"I believe you are right there," Dale could not keep a trace of bitterness out of his voice. At that moment, with Adele Castle seated before him, her heart full of loyalty and blind love, he could have strangled Ainsworth without a qualm.

She looked at him intently, her mouth and throat quivering, her dark eyes full of gentle regrets. She rose and came toward him.

"You are a wonderful friend," she murmured.

It was one of the most uncomfortable moments in Dale's life. She was smiling at him through a veil of mist, reading his face—and reading it wrongly.

"I don't want any misunderstanding to come between us," she said gently. "I hope we shall remain the best of friends."

"Yes, always," said Dale hickly. Was there ever such a situation? Here he was, racking his brain to save her from a heartbreaking disaster. And she, misunderstanding, was endeavoring to save him from another sort of tragedy.

"Then we understand each other?" She gave him her hand with a gesture full of friendliness and sympathy.

"Oh, perfectly——"

Wambley's portly figure appeared at the door. "There is a gentleman on the telephone, Miss Castle," he announced.

Dale and the girl exchanged glances. He nodded slightly. She went out, and when she returned a few mninuts later all the warm coloring had fled from her face.

"It was Dr. Moffett." she told him.

"I expected that. I suppose his voice was full of sweetness and light?"

"He asked me if I had seen the article in the Sentinel. I told him I had, and he said it was only a beginning. He added that the mysterious Mr. Graves will positively be in jail tomorrow night unless he receives a check for $100,000 tonight."

EXPEDITION TO ANTARCTIC

Sir Douglas Mawson to Go on Ship "Discoverer" Under Joint Auspices

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 23. — Plans are practically complete for the "British-Australian-New Zealand Antarctic expedition" which will sail from Capetown, South Africa, in November under the leadership of Sir Douglas Mawson.

Sir Douglas is in England making arrangements for the departure of the ship Discovery, which is being loaned by the British government for the expedition. The three governments will share the costs of the trip and already the necessary funds from Australia have been fully subcribed. There will be a representative from each of the three governments aboard the Discovery.

The expedition will sail from Capetown for Enderby Land, whence the ship will turn east and make her way slowly along the coastal area through the pack 8r89 ice. The object of the voyage is to make a survey of this little know sector. It is expected that the Discovery will spend the whole of next summer in the Antarctic region, making for Perth or Hobart in the fall.

A moth plane, suitable for landing on ice or water, is being taken for short flights over the mainland, though Sir Douglas does not intend to land any shore parties.

PROFITABLE EVENING

"Who's the absent minded one now?" said the professor as they left the church one rainy night. "You left your umbrella back there and I not only remembered mine, but I brought yours, too." And he produced them from his coat.

His wife gazed blankly at him.

"But," she said, "neither of us brought one to church."—U. P. Magazine.

GYROS BLANK SONS BASEBALL

Before a handful of dyed-in-the-wool fans, on Acropolis Hill grounds last night, Gyros, went into second place in the City Baseball League, by blanking the Sons of Canada 8 to nil. There was very little enthusiasm displayed by either team, it being too cold to play good ball.

N. Chenoski was on the mound for the winners and he held the Sons to two singles, and one of these was a doubtful one. He also led his team on the offensive, getting three runs and three hits out of three times up. In the first inning, with two out, he leaned on one for three bases and scored on Haveland's single. Lambie, in centre field for the Sons, made a nice running catch of McKeown's Texas Leaguer in the third. Menzies started for the Sons but retired at the end of the third in favor of Gwyer. The game was called at the end of the fifth on account of darkness.

Following is the league standing to date:

Around The World With Sport Fans

(By The Tramp)

In a recent editorial discussing the question of the future of baseball, the Dundalk Herald expresses the fear that this famous Canadian sport is going the way of lacrosse. Speaking particularly of the towns and rural districts of the province of Ontario the Herald is forced to the reluctant conclusion that the young people of today are indifferent to the game, and those who might play resent the effort demanded and prefer to ride in automobiles to indulging in this healthful exercise.

If the Dundalk paper is correct, the decline of interest is the fault of this age that has produced a pampered generation without the zeal for strenuous exercise. But is it so? So far as one may judge from signs in the city, there is little difference in the enthusiasm displayed by the young people of today for sport in general from that of those a quarter of a century ago. Professional games are attended by tens of thousands each day during the season, and vacant lots and public parks are freely utilized by young folks who delight to play the game. One thing that has developed in recent years is the entrance of young women into this sphere of athletics and their enthusiasm has more than compensated for any waning interest on the part of the modern youth. It will be an unfortunate day if the public interest in this fine game should pass away, and baseball be cast to the moles and bats as a form of exercise that made too strenuous demands on an effete generation.

PAPER SUITS IS NEXT MOVE

May Be Step to Break Man's Enslavement to Fashion

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 23:—The moot question of how mere man can obtain some sort of equality with the opposite sex in the matter of summer attire, a question that has brought forth advocates of everything from pajamas to barrels, has another answer. It comes from Waldemar Kaempfert, director of the Rosenwald Industrial Museum.

Man's enslavement to fashion, says Mr. Kaempfert, will be broken by paper suits, costing about $2 apiece and thrown away after about two weeks' wear.

"The fibers," Mr. Kaempfert says, will be made of paper and will be spun like cotton or wool, then woven into attractive patterns. Instead of being sewn together the woven paper will be glued. A man will step into a clothes shop, where an expert tailor will in a few minutes drape strips of paper about his form and then fasten them with fish gue.

"Such a suit—unlike a paper tissue towel—will be unaffected by rain, and hold its shape for at least two weeks, after which it can be thrown away and a new one purchased.

"There is no question that present clothes are quite mad. But we are slaves of convention. Although a thousand men marching down to work in pajamas would liberate us from the present style tyranny, it is impossible to find a thousand such men. The paper suit is our only hope."

TINY MAN BUT IS GIANT AMONG HIS COLLEAGUES

Hon. Philip Snowden Who Has Figured Largely at The Hague is Dwarf

IS PHYSICAL WRECK

Is Incisive in Speech; Chancellor Commands Respect Everywhere

(F. H. King in the New York Herald Tribune)

In size and physical appearance the Right Hon. Philip Snowden would seem out of all proportion to the row he has raised at The Hague conference to make the Young reparations plan effective. In intellectual stature and rough and tumble political experience, the diminutive Yorkshireman is equal to any fight.

Scarcely five feet tall, thin and frail of body, Mr. Snowden has been crippled for many years. A neglected bicycle accident when a youth made him an invalid for a year and a cripple for life.

Slowly and painfully, with the aid of two canes, he drags himself into the crowded House of Commons and slipping into a crevice between the bulky forms of Prime Minister MacDonald and Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, on the famous front bench, almost disappears from view. His arrival seems to soften the bitterest of Labor's enemies, but it is only for a moment. On his special subjects he is an intellectual giant among his colleagues, and he neither asks nor gives quarter to his political opponents.

Eagle-eyed and with every nerve strained he follows proceedings on matters on which he is expert, such as national and international finance. Soon he is in the midst of the debate, cold, logical, penetrating; caustic in address and master of invective. Last year he called Winston Churchill's budget a fantastic half-baked monstrosity.

Supporting himself with one cane or by leaning on the old dispatch box on the great desk between the government and the opposition benches of the House of Commons, the present chancellor often speaks as if in great physical pain, his thin lips bloodless, his pale face showing the effect of long hours of work and study, his thin hair swept back from a furrowed domed brow.

Straightforward and sincere as any man in British public life, Snowden demands respect. His opponents must fight his mental powers rather than his weakened body. The principles for which he battles are deep-rooted. His hobbies are work, study and labor movement.

Mrs. Snowden

Any mention of Philip Snowden is incomplete without reference to his wife. The Snowdens are one of the romances of Labor's rise to power. He came from a Yorkshire village and for eight years as a civil servant in London. Returning to his native county as a Labor speaker he married Ethel Annakin, a beautiful and talented girl. Together they worked through years of Labor's apprenticeship to power. As a speaker, writer and brilliant political helpmate Mrs. Snowden is probably Miss Margaret Bondfield's best known woman Laborite.

Mr. Snowden's challenge to a committee of experts' view that the Young plan is no surrender to those who have followed his preparations for the opposition which has come to him during the last few days at The Hague. For years he has criticized the settlement of World War I, particularly the late Conservative government's settlement with France and Italy. In the background is Stanley Baldwin's settlement of the British war debt to the United States.

A few months ago in a scathing attack on the government Mr. Snowden made a sensational denunciation of the principle of the famous Balfour note of 1922 which is the rock upon which Britain has based all her war debt negotiations.

Calling the Balfour note "famous" Mr. Snowden said the Labor party never subscribed to its principles and declared the Labor party would hold itself open, if circumstances required, to repudiate its conditions. By the Balfour declaration Great Britain said she would be satisfied with collection from her World War Allies sufficient sum to cover her own debt payment to the United States, although this was only equivalent to a small part of the sum due her.

Mr. Snowden's statement created a sensation. He stuck to his guns as he is sticking in the Hague. Mr. MacDonald, the leader of the opposition, was called to repudiate his colleague. He told the House of Commons the Labor party has no idea of repudiating the Balfour principle of the board, but he maintained that debt agreements were subject to revision. Mr. Snowden, silent and uncompromising, sat by his guns and never retracted a word.

During the recent general election campaign in England Mr. Snowden warned the country that if he should be called upon to attend an international conference of debts or reparations he would not subscribe to the doctrine that a succeeding government is necessarily bound by the action of a previous government. He cited Gladstone as a precedent for this.

A religion that makes people tolerant, unselfish and human, is not scorned by even the wicked.

The people I pity this year in Prince Rupert are the vendors of ice cream. They must have done about as well as the person who hires rowboats and canoes.

Some people can make a common slip of paper worth a thousand dollars simply by signing it, and others are not worth a printer's cuss word and neither is their signature.

If you can hear the doctor's old bus rattle as it goes up the road and the editor's shoes are down at heel as he walks, it's a hick town.

WATT DISMISSAL AGAIN AIRED BY SECRETARY OF WAR VETERANS AT MEETING.

dency to fill positions vacated by veterans with those who have not seen service, and, while veterans wish to be fair and cannot claim all positions in the government service, we should insist that vacancies of this kind be again filled by veterans. I regret to note that the position vacated by the assistant to the government agent here has been filled by a person who is not a veteran, although it was formerly held by one who saw service in the late war.

Carrying On Program

"In visiting our northern British Columbia branches I am carrying out part of the organization program arranged by your executive of the provincial command some considerable time ago. By the time I have completed my visit to the north I will have covered most of our branches in this province.

"Everywhere I go I find the utmost enthusiasm for the work of the Legion, which is now recognized by governing bodies as the mouthpiece of the veterans in Canada. As part of the British Empire Service League, which represents veterans' organizations in eighteen parts of the British Empire, we belong to what might be termed the largest British institution in existence today and we wield a very large influence in the Empire, particularly in regards to matters afecting war, etc.

"In Canada we now have no less than 776 active branches with over sixty thousand members and in British Columbia there are 97 active branches with over 8000 members. In the United States of America are also Canadian Legion branches composed of Canadian veterans, one branch having been formed in Los Angeles recently.

Adjustment Bureau

"In Ottawa we maintain an adjustment bureau, where pension claims made by veterans and dependents are dealt with. The federal government, on the recommendation of a mixed parliamentary committee, contributes the sum of $10,000 towards the cost of maintaining this bureau, as we provide free service to veterans whether they are members of the Legion or not.

"The Canadian Legion is now endeavoring to have the federal govenment agree to provide free medical treatment for all veterans, irrespective of whether the disability is due to service or not. This procedure has been adopted in the United States.

"There is still remaining in the canteen fund in British Columbia the sum of $211,000, but, if this fund is spent in the future as it has been in the past, the whole of the money will be gone in the short period of eight and one-half years, a period which, in my opinion, is all too short. Meantime, the money is expended by assisting veterans to pay medical accounts, etc., caused by sickness. None of it is expended on unemployment only.

"Yast year in British Columbia we distributed over 160,000 poppies and 511 poppy wreaths. All of these poppies and wreaths were assembled in British Columbia. This year, with your help, we hope to do better. The supplies are made up by disabled veterans in this province.

"For some considerable time there has been agitation to have a separate building at Essondale for mental cases who are veterans. We have now suceeded in making progress and have been promised a separate building in the near future.

"The Legion was successful in having the returned soldiers' insurance scheme extended for another year—to August 31, 1930. Many veterans, physically unfit to secure insurance with life insurance companies, have taken out policies under the government scheme.

"It is still hoped that the next largest organization, the Army and Navy Veterans Association, will join the Legion. This association has about 46 branches in Canada, with seven in British Columbia.

"At the present time a pensioner who is dissatisfied with his percentage of pension has no appeal. In Australia they have a pensions assessment appeal board and the Legion is endeavoring to have a board of this kind instituted in Canada by the federal government.

"I am glad to have had the opportunity of visiting Prince Rupert branch and wish to congratulate you upon your efforts to carry out that sacred trust left to us by those who died that we might live."

The meeting was presided over by William Rance, president of the local branch of the Canadian Legion. It was followed by a smoker in honor of Mr. Macnicol.

WORLD'S GREATEST TRAVEL SYSTEM

LOCAL BRANCH OF FISHERIES ASSOCIATION

At Meeting Last Night Substantial Sum Handed to Board of Trade

The local branch of the Canadian Fisheries Association met in the City Hall last night to settle the affairs of the recent convention.

Great satisfaction was felt and much appreciation expressed by Chairman Johnson and others present at the whole-hearted financial support and cooperation extended by the business people and citizens in Prince Rupert that made possible the carrying out of such a successful convention. Mr. Johnson, who accompanied the delegates to Vancouver and Victoria where they were also entertained, stated that it was the concensus of opinion of the delegates that Prince Rupert had put over the best Fisheries Convention ever held in Canada.

In view of the fact that there was a substantial surplus left above expenses and that the fisheries concerns themselves had subscribed more than sufficient to liquidate the convention expenses, it was agreed to hand over to the Board of Trade for the purpose of sending delegates to the Peace River, Edmonton and Calgary Convention, or other publicity matters, all the monies that the Board of Trade Committee had collected from the uptown business people and which amounted to $571.

The local branch of the association will put on a Fish Banquet during Canada's National Fish week, and invite the Trades and Labor Council, Gyro and Rotary Clubs, Retail Merchants, Board of Trade and their ladies, to join them.

T. H. Johnson, who has been chairman of the local branch for some 10 years, thought it his duty to resign from the office, in view of the fact that he had been elected president of the Canadian Fisheries Association of Canada. John Dybhavn was elected chairman in his stead, and Jas. L. Lee was reelected secretary.
