Naval Conference Proceeding in London Regard to Proposal to Reduce British and U. S. Navies

LONDON, July 30.—The first lord of the admiralty, Hon. A. V. Alexander, has joined the discussions proceeding between Rt. Hon. J. Ramsay Macdonald, prime minister of Great Britain, and General Dawes, United States ambassador to Britain, and Ambassador Gibson, representing United States in Paris, with a view to reaching an agreement on the problem of naval armament reduction. An official communique says "substantial progress was made toward an agreement."

Comment in London newspapers with respect to the conference leans toward the belief that the cruiser strength will not be the only naval armament reduction. The Express is of the opinion that battleships, destroyers and submarines will also be affected.

The conference, which is one of the most important ever held, is proceeding at No. 1 Downing Street.

Salmon Run is Back to Normal This Year and Canners are Well Pleased With Result of Catch

The salmon run this year is a pretty clear indication that last year's failure was due to some purely local cause and was no indication of a general falling off in the supply in the northern district. This year the run is back to normal and the canners are very well satisfied with the results obtained so far. This week the run is continuing both on the Skeena and Naas rivers, the catches averaging about thirty sockeyes and from fifty to one hundred pinks to the boat.

Sockeye fishing will close on both the Skeena and Naas on August 16 and at Smith's Inlet, where the catch has been poor, the season for sockeyes closes at the end of this week. Several streams in the Naas area have been closed this year altogether as they had been depleted.

The total catch on the Skeena River this year so far has been 91,206 cases, made up of: Sockeye, 49,809; springs, 4218; cohoes, 14,031; pinks, 22,815; and chums, 333.

The catch on the Naas up to the end of last week was 17,138 cases, of which sockeye were 12,588; springs, 403; cohoes, 139; pinks, 3082; and chums, 926.

At Rivers Inlet the total was 58,504, of which 57,733 are sockeye.

At Smith's Inlet the total catch was 11,897 cases, of which 11,123 were sockeye.

This makes a total pack to date of 178,745.

Most of Them Will Arrive on Train Tomorrow Afternoon

The delegates to the fisheries convention which opens here Thursday morning are expected to arrive tomorrow. While some will undoubtedly come in on the boat tomorrow morning, the majority should be here on the train in the afternoon, arriving at 3:30.

It has been suggested that a good crowd might assemble at the station to greet the visitors.

RUSSO-CHINA SITUATION

No Negotiations So Far Between Two Countries View to Settlement

LONDON, July 30.—Prospects for a peaceful solution of the difficulties between China and Soviet Russia seemed slight today. All reports of negotiations under way appeared to have proven false.

China was reported to be very anxious to negotiate a settlement of the problem arising out of her seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway and is confident of an agreement if Russia would realize her mistake in propagandizing China. There was no indication, however, that Russia would recognize such conditions.

WINNIPEG, July 30.—Intense heat still smothers the prairies and has gripped the entire United States as well as the Canadian provinces in a suffocating hold. High temperature is reported everywhere and no relief is in sight for the scorching crops. The menace is continent-wide.

A clinic was also held at Ocean Falls and a clinic is now being held at Anyox.

The crew of three men who were aboard the sloop at the time of the seizure are under arrest.

The Betty and Billie is from Nassau in the Bahama Islands.

Sees Advantage to Prince Rupert From Development Of the Port of Stewart

North to See Fast Growth in Near Future Is Opinion of Editor of Financial News of Vancouver

That the remarkable development that has occurred in the northern areas of Canada from Quebec to Alberta during recent years, creating a new impetus to prosperity in eastern Canadian cities, is at last becoming evident in British Columbia and that Prince Rupert should benefit directly from this economic fact, is the opinion expressed by Howard T. Mitchell, publisher of The Financial News of Western Canada, Vancouver, who passed through Prince Rupert yesterday on his way to Stewart.

"Undoubtedly the most important event in the north in recent years is the decision of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, through its mining subsidiary, the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co., to interest itself in the opening up of a new transportation route and a new mining and agricultural region in the north," said Mr. Mitchell.

"I have heard expressed some misgivings, both in Vancouver and Prince Rupert, as to the effect of the new development on the business of these ports. This view is difficult to understand, for we could not get less trade from this great northern territory than we have today and any development that may occur there by reason of more adequate transportation facilities must inevitably bring new business to both Prince Rupert and Vancouver.

WOMEN IN SENATE

It's interesting to read of the efforts necessary to enable women to take their seats seats in the Canadian Senate. They may sit in the House of Commons, but the Senate is a much more holy and exclusive body and women should not defile it with their presence.

Women should be ashamed of themselves for wanting to sit in the Senate. The old men's home is hardly suitable for energetic and virile women. If women once make a place for themselves there, it will be more difficult to abolish it.

The whole movement is a mistake. It would have been much better for the women to have devoted their energies to ridding the country of the second chamber than by trying to secure a place there.

Your business is what you make it. If it fails it is due to some defect in the owner.

ENDURANCE TESTS

It seems about time there was an end of the endurance test. The long flight of the St. Louis Robin indicates that it is a tedious business and not in any sense of the word a sport. The only value apparently is to advertise some particular motor as being capable of running for an indefinite period. Once the aviators solved the problem of sleeping in the air the test was easy. There are so many other activities that might well take the place of keeping an airplane hovering over a given point for several weeks.

If anticipation is better than realization then we must all have enjoyed the summer of 1929.

SLOWING DOWN

Several times this paper has issued a warning against slowing down. In Prince Rupert, where business is more or less spasmodic and the conditions of making a living are not difficult, there is a tendency for us all to slow down and thus lose our ability to compete should we decide to go outside to the larger centres. Once we give way to the prevailing tendency we find it very difficult to once more speed up.

While the magazines are full of warnings against too much speed, we need a warning against losing our speed and thus creating a handicap for ourselves individually and for the city in which we live.

Laughter is one of the chief things that differentiates man from the ape. The person who does not laugh is still very nearly related to the tree dwellers.

New Strike Made on Neepawa Property Near Smithers; Find Near Francois Lake Hospital; Airplane Service to Remote Fields

What is regarded as an important new showing was recently uncovered by Grover Loveless and Walter Fah in the course of development work on the Neepawa group, controlled by the Jessie Gold Mines Syndicate, adjoining the Duthie mine on Hudson Bay Mountain. Strong mineralization was broken into and subsequent work by way of open cuts demonstrated the vein to be ten to twelve feet wide showing galena, arsenical iron and zinc. The strike encourages the belief that an extensive zone of rich ore will be disclosed by development at depth. The future program of development will be decided upon later.

A mineral strike made recently near the site of the Francois Lake Hospital has been attracting considerable attention. Some heavily mineralized ore was found on the surface and claims have now been staked by four prospectors. John Roberts and Wayman Weldon were the original stakers.

Three engineers of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. were recently taken in with their supplies from Prince George to the headwaters of the Meslinka, a tributary of Finlay River, by A. D. Cruickshank on the Western Canada Airways plane. The distance is 230 miles by air and the return flight was made in nine hours. By any other method of travel the round trip would take fully a month. The Consolidated engineers spent a couple of weeks in the vicinity of Aiken Lake and were then moved by the plane to the Fishing Lakes, a widening in the Finlay River immediately west of Finlay Mountain, where other properties in which Consolidated is interested are being examined. The plane bids fair to become very popular in connection with transportation to the remote mining fields of the central interior.

Major A. W. Davis, well known mining engineer, recently made an examination of the Harvey group near Smithers. This property is in the Babine Range and until recently was under option to the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co.

The new directors of the La Rose mine at Alice Arm intend to proceed with further development work this year, but no definite plans have yet been made as to the extent of operations. Nor has any date yet been set for the work to commence.

Not as much work as was originally planned will be carried out this season on the Red Bluff property at Alice Arm, but a commencement will be made as soon as possible and much valuable informtion is expected to be obtained, J. N. McPhee announces. The Red Bluff Mining Syndicate was formed a few months ago for the purpose of developing the property which is located about seven miles northeast of Alice Arm and on which indications are good for a big tonnage of copper ore. A number of mining companies have expressed their desire of examining the property.

The Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting & Power Co. has closed down operations both on the Outsider mine on Portland Canal and the Golskeish mine near Anyox, and, instead, will work this year the Quartz Point and Bonanza mines, both of which are located close to the smelter. Last year the Outsider produced only 2564 tons of ore, while 13,111 tons of silica was taken from the Golskeish, from the latter 1000 ounces of gold and 6000 ounces of silver being derived.

During the year 1928 the coke plant of the Granby Co. at Anyox produced 28,680 tons of coke, 230,107 cubic feet of gas, 246,579 galons of tar, 200,555 pounds of ammonia, 659 gallons of solvent naphtha and 58,253 tons of naphthaline.

The new plant recently installed on the Northern Light property at Stewart which has been merged with the Premier Border is now running smoothly. Underground development with a full crew has been resumed with G. R. Bancroft, consulting engineer, in personal charge.

WILD PIGEONS

Silver Birch Farm,
Terrace, B.C.,
July 25, 1929

Editor, Daily News:—

I read your editorial on "Wild Pigeons" with great interest.

In "Birds of Western Canada," published by The Victoria Memorial Museum it is stated that the Band-tailed Pigeon has a distribution "North at least to Bella Coola."

Since the publication of this book it has been established that their range is considerably to the north of that inlet.

Four or five years ago a pair were observed near the plant of the Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co. Ltd., at Prince Rupert.

Two years ago your paper reported one of the C.N.R. engineers having seen several along the railway.

Last year Herman Frickman observed a flock of at least 100 at a point on the south side of the Skeena River about two miles east of the Terrace bridge.

This year they are again in this neighborhood, some have been seen at the same place as those observed last year, while others are reported around Vanarsdol.

They are usually seen while feeding on elderberries. While they are closed as game birds, they leave the district before the open season comes.

They will most probably increase as a result of their early migration and provide a welcome addition to the bird life of Central British Columbia.

Yours faithfully,
WILL ROBINSON.

ALWAYS BEER IF NOTHING ELSE

Hon. R. H. Pooley Said to Be Haunted by the Worry of Beer by the Glass Problem

(Vancouver Province)

It seems quite like old times to hear that the Government of British Columbia is gravely perturbed about beer. In the dear old days of good old John Oliver, the government was always perturbed about beer. Since Dr. MacLean went out and Dr. Tolmie came in, there have been other grave government perturbations—as for instance the regrettable necessity for enquiring into pretty nearly everything ever done by the government gone out—and it almost seemed as if beer had gone out of politics. Probably the correct statement about it is that when there is nothing else to worry about in politics, there is always beer. Anyhow, Princeton has voted for beer-by-the-glass, and Mr. Attorney-General Pooley intimates that a deep and abiding sorrow has thereby entered his blameless life.

Not that Mr. Attorney-General Pooley disapproves of beer-by-the glass, as his predecessor Mr. Manson used to disapprove of it. The trouble is much worse than any such trifle as having to disfavor something as a public minister that you favor as a private citizen. The trouble is that Princeton has voted for beer-by-the-glass in a political constituency which voted against beer-by-the-glass in 1924. And if the Tolmie Government validates the sale of beer-by-the glass in Princeton, just because Princeton wants it, Mr. Pooley sees a tremendous public agitation around the nature and principle of local option about beer, and he does not know what will be the end of it.

Princeton lies across the Hope Mountain, and the miners of that place would like to have their beer-by-the-glass, just the same as the sinful metropolis of Vancouver—or just the same as Mr. Pooley's own sinful town of Esquimalt, for that matter—and have voted for it. But, politically, Princeton is in the riding of Similkameen. And the glory of Similkameen is that it has not only given its favorite son, Hon. Minister of Mines McKenzie, to the world of statesmanship, but that it has also stood like a rock against the pouring flood of beer-by-the-glass.

Sinful Vancouver

Mr. Pooley takes a very grave view of this business. He says it opens up wide issues. He says it requires very careful consideration. He says he doesn't know what will be done. It seems that the question is: What, when and where is local option local? Princeton wants beer-by-the-glass, wants local option about beer-by-the-glass, doesn't see why it can't have beer-by-the-glass if sinful Vancouver and Esquimalt may have it. But Penticton, forty miles from Princeton as the crow flies, not by terra firma, in that country—doesn't want beer-by-the glass; and Penticton is also in the riding of Similkameen, which has voted against beer-by-the-glass.

It is surely quite a dilemma. Princeton can't for the thirsty soul of it see how Penticton can claim to exercise a local option about beer-by-the-glass which extends forty miles away as the crow flies. Princeton can't see why it couldn't have beer-by-the-glass without injury to the soul and conscience of Penticton and other places in the Similkameen riding. And probably Mr. Pooley doesn't see it either. But there is the Government Liquor Act, as made and provided in the dear old days of the late government; and there is the great principle of local option in beer, which nobody has ever understood; and there is the dreadful suspicion that beer is coming back into politics again. We don't wonder that Mr. Pooley is haunted by the conviction that when there is nothing else, there is always beer.

In his address yesterday Dr. Cunningham spoke of the gradual change in the mission of Rotary and emphasized that this year the international aspect was particularly to the fore at a time when all the world is talking of peace and improved international relationships.

DEPORTATION ASKED FOR PETER VEREGIN, HEAD OF DOUKHOBORS

REGINA, July 30.—A demand has been made upon the Dominion government for the deportation of Peter Veregin, leader of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, more commonly known as the Doukhobors.

According to a despatch to the Morning Leader from Kamsack, Sask., it was learned that this demand has been made to Hon. Robert Forke, minister of immigration, and that the evidence upon which the citizens of Kamsack generally conclude Veregin to be an unfit citizen has been forwarded to the department.

to Seek Legal Advice

Veregin passed through the town on the train for Winnipeg. He stated to some of his followers who met him that the reason for his visit to the Manitoba capital was to obtain legal advice as to the law in respect to parades, the clash between the Sons of Freedom, of which Veregin is the head, and the townspeople a week ago being the reason for seeking this advice.

Earlier in the day he had arrived at his home in Veregin from Buchanan, and had held conferences with a number of his sect closest to him.

A few days ago, it is understood, a committee of citizens undertook to present to the federal department of immigration certain evidence which, they argue shows Veregin to be an undesirable citizen. It is charged against him that he is inciting his people to disregard the law of the country, that he is fomenting strife, and that in other ways he is a fit subject for deportation.

SYNOPSIS

While Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of "The Picaroon," whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale, Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls and requests that strange happenings at 262 Bank Street, the house next to the one in which he lives, be investigated. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman to guard the house in which he lived before he moved next door after his wife had deserted him, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light.

Just as Ferryman is showing the captain a picture of his wife, the telephone rings and a voice tells of finding a woman's body at 262 Bank Street. Summers and Ferryman hurry there.

"The Picaroon," who preys upon the rich and then offers the return of his loot on the payment of 10 per cent of its value to charity, has written a note to Adele Castle, requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. She was taken to a strange house where, through a queer green light, she could glimpse only the outline of a man calling himself Dr. Moffett, who tells her he holds evidence which would convict her father of being connected with a crooked financial deal and send him to prison. Mr. Castle tells Adele Dr. Moffett demands blackmail of $100,000.

INSTALMENT EIGHT

Summers Finds a Clew

But the queerest part of the whole affair, in Summers' estimation, was the fact that the news of the murder had reached him shortly after Ferryman had told him the story of his missing wife. This was one of those coincidences which Summers always viewed with suspicion.

It was somewhat modified, of course, by the fact that the woman had been dead for ten or twelve hours when the body was found, yet it gave the captain a great deal to think of as he went from room to room on his tour of inspection.

Every room was furnished in good taste and arranged in perfect order. Here and there were odd little touches which showed how Ferryman had endeavored to maintain everything in its original state. Yet the house seemed in need of the living, human touch to vitalize it. A sense of emptiness and grief was lurking in the dim nooks and corners, waiting for the enlivening touch of sun and air and laughter.

Summers went from room to room, finding nothing of significance and having no clear idea of what he expected to find. He was merely fixing the arrangement of the house in his mind while he waited. At length he entered a great oak-paneled room that appeared to be the library.

There were books and pictures and curios that bespoke a culture and diversified taste, and cozy nooks and easy-chairs that testified to a desire for ease and comforts. The feeling of vacancy and abandonment was less noticeable here than in the other parts of the house. In a vague fashion Summers felt that the big morris chair at the table looked just as if some one might have sat in it only yesterday.

He sat down in it himself, spread out his disproportionately short legs, and let his eyes rove over the great room with its high ceiling, its handsome oak paneling and its soft-hued rugs of Oriental pattern. It was here, so Mr. Ferryman had told him, that some of the strange things reported by the caretaker had happened.

Axelson had heard sounds of trespassing coming from this room, and, upon entering to investigate, a green light had been flashed in his eyes. It had disappeared in an instant, leaving no explanation in its trail. Summers had thought it rather strange, but not particularly startling. Since then the discovery of a woman's body in the house had given an element of importance to the most trifling details.

"A green ilght," Summers muttered. He scratched his top-heavy head and scowled. "What would anybody want with a green light?"

He got up and crossed over to an electric switch on the wall. He touched it and a soft electric light sprang up in various places and flooded the room. It was just an ordinary white light, without the faintest trace of green.

Summers fingered his jaw and reflected. Axelson might be the excitable sort that is easily mistaken. Possibly the green light had flashed only in his imagination. But, if so, why should he have imagined a green light in particular? Why not a blue or an orange one? Perhaps——

A Cigar Band

But Summers decided he would let his speculations rest for the present. Later he would test Axelson's capacity for accurate observation, with emphasis on his ability to distinguish different colors. It would be time enough for that in the afternoon. Summers' luncheon hour was already past, and he was hungry.

McCabe and his colleague could be trusted to conduct the preliminary inquiries and make satisfactory notes.

He switched off the light and moved to the door. It happened to be the wrong door, as he discovered in a moment. It opened only into a short hall, which in turn communicated with what appeared to be a music room. He looked in, then started to retrace his steps and find the right way out, but something made him look down. Nestling in the fabric of a rug lay a small bright object which upon investigation proved to be a cigar band.

"Verona," read the embossed inscription on the label. It was the kind of label that adorns only expensive cigars. Summers happened to know something about this particular brand, and he was aware that it was a very rare one. Only one person of his acquaintance smoked it—a certain fastidious gentleman who ate, drank and smoked only the best.

Summers' eyes narrowed. A hard, knowing grin touched his lips. With the cigar band resting in his palm, he looked down at the spot where he had found it. To be sure, it was far-fetched to suppose that it had been dropped there by the particular person he had in mind, yet his thoughts circled around the idea. It seemed to tickle his fancy in a sardonic way.

The fastidious gentleman in question was also a very cautious and adroit individual, one who would scarcely be likely to drop a clew in such a careless manner. He would be even less likely—granting that Summers' hazy surmise was correct—to smoke a cigar in a strange house, especially if bent upon an errand of the sort with which Summers always associated his name.

"But you can never tell," was his thought as he carefully tucked the band away in his notebook. "He mightn't have smoked the cigar here. Maybe the band came loose in his pocket and fell out when he reached for his pencil or watch or something. Any how——"

Summers left the hall and returned to the library. He had already seen a smoking stand beside the library table, and among other articles there was a box of cigars. Probably it had stood there untouched since Ferryman fled from the painful associations of the house and moved next door. The captain opened the box and examined one of the cigars. It was dry and brittle.

"Eclipsias," he observed. His mind was a crowded storehouse of miscellaneous information and among other things he happened to know a great deal about the various brands of cigars and the type of men who smoked them. "A man who smokes Verona would never smoke Eclipsias—that's one sure thing."

Satisfied with his discovery, inconclusive though it was, he went out to luncheon. His favorite restaurant was some distance away, on the other side of the Washington Square section, but the food was good enough to compensate one for going out of his way. At this late hour the place was almost deserted. His eyes lighted upon a lone individual at a table in the rear.

Martin Dale

He smiled grimly and walked down the aisle between the tables.

"Hello, Dale. Mind if I join you?" And without waiting for an answer he sat down.

Martin Dale's face brightened. He looked as fresh and keen as if he had just emerged from his morning shower. Every little detail of his appearance seemed to blend into a life devoted to intriguing and congenial pursuits. His cravat was just the right shade, the cuff links in the soft shirt of faint lavender were just the right pattern. His eyes were frank and open, but seemed to hold something in reserve for another hour and another occasion.

"This is luck, Summers," he declared. 'You know how I detest eating alone. I was just longing for the sight of a familiar face and there is no face in the world I would rather see than yours."

Summers grumbled something and consulted the menu.

"I can recommend the broiled squab," said Dale.

When the fat Latin proprietor appeared, to declare himself honored and to take personally his valued guest's order, Summers requested broiled squab. Dale's suggestions were invariably sound.

"You look a bit glum," Dale observed, studying him out of his lively gray eyes.

"Do I?"

"You do. All the way from brains to bunions you are the picture of dejection."

"I haven't any bunions."

"Then it must be some other affliction. But maybe that's a rash deduction. Come to think of it, old top, you are the only man I know whose face is no index to his state of mind. You never look what you feel and you never feel what you look. In your most hilarious moments you look like an honorar pall-bearer. Judging your present sour mein by what I know of your eccentricities, I should say you had something up your sleeve."

"You're talking rot."

"Maybe so. There is a very fine distinction between rot and profundity, old dear. Seriously, though, if there is nothing up your sleeve, suppose you prove it by shaking it. If nothing falls out, I'll believe you."

"Oh, go chase yourself. There is nothing up my sleeve except a pink rabbit and a two-headed baby elephant."

"I'll wager there is one more thing." A sly gleam of merriment came into his gray eyes. "Own up, old socks. There is a nice little clew up that sleeve of yours which has to do with a certain enterprising scamp known as The Picaroon. Am I right?"

Summers' reddish face closed up. His lips tightened. He fixed his companion across the table with a narrow gaze as inscrutable as a poker player's. The squab arrived just then, and he gave it his appreciative attention for several minutes before he spoke.

"Dale," he said casually, "do you ever wear glasses?"

"Glasses?" Dale's eyes contracted in the manner of one who suspects a snare in the most innocent remark. "Why should I? My eyes are good. I have illuminating moments when I can see through even the thick skull of a captain of police."

"But what about glasses?" Summers persisted. "Ever wear them?"

"Only automobile goggles." Dale regarded him guardedly. Behind the faintly mocking smile in his eyes was a gleam of caution. "They keep dust out of my eyes and cobwebs out of my brain. You ought to try them. They will be good for your brain."

"Green?"

"Thanks for the tip. Automobile goggles, eh? Colored?"

"Yes."

"Green?"

The faintest flicker passed across Dale's eyes. His brows went up ever so slightly.

"No, amber."

SCARCITY OF FUR ANIMALS

EDMONTON July 30:—Furs were scarce last year and there is no sign of improvement, according to C. H. French, commissioner of the fur trade for the Hudson's Bay company, who is a business visitor to Edmonton on his way to Winnipeg from British Columbia and Alberta posts of the company.

Mr. French stated that there was no doubt but that the scarcity of furs during the past winter had worked a hardship on all trappers and the Indians. The distress of the latter, however, had been alleviated to some extent in Alberta by their being given permission to catch ten beaver, whereas the white trapper and hunter was allowed none.

The commissioner said he did not think this coming season would be much better, as there was no apparent sign of increase of the fur-bearing animals in those districts where the trapper carries out his work.

He also stated that the present high price level for furs would be maintained, there being no indication of a decrease in values owing to the difficulty of getting good furs.

ELKS' NINE WON BALL FIXTURE

Gyros Went Down to Defeat Last Evening by Score of 9-5; Many Errors Spoiled Game

In the City League baseball fixture last night, Elks drew up to within half a game of the leading Sons of Canada, by defeating the Gyros nine to five. A few minutes before the game, Ole Haveland, who was practicing at third, was hit in the face by a grounder that took a crooked bounce just before it got to him. It loosened seven teeth, and he had to leave the field. He went down to a dentist and came back in the third inning minus three front molars. When he came to bat in the fourth he received a big hand from the stands.

The Gyros were rather wobbly in the field, letting many chances slip by them. The Elks got a run in the first on an error and a two bagger.. In the third they collected another on one hit and a couple of errors. They scored again in the fourth on two hits an an infield wobble. The fifth, however was their big inning, when five men crossed home plate. Alex Mitchell drove one through Farquhar's legs and was safe. Stevens fanned and Dido Gurvich hit to left. Gosse singled to left and Mitchell and Gurvich scored. Moore doubled down the first base line and Gosse scored. Harold drove Moore in with a line drive to left and stole second and went to third on a wild throw to catch him. George Mitchell went out Tite to Farquhar. Arseneau hit one to centre that Bury managed to get his hands on but fell and Harold scored. Loblick ended the inning with a liner to Moran. That ended the Elks' scoring for the night.

The Gyros made three hits in the first inning but failed to get a man across the plate. They got one run in the third on a couple of errors. In the fourth Tite drew a pass and with two out Farquhar tripled to deep left scoring Tite. The Gyros staged a rally in the fifth when McKown got to first on Harold's error. Chenoski whiffed but Easson hit one to left for two bases, McKown going to third. Bury struck out but Dido dropped the ball and threw high to Stevens, who missed it and the two runners scored, Scoop going to second. Pritchard hit one over the infield. Tite popped one to Loblick for two out. Haveland drove one past Loblick's head and Scoop scored. Farquhar drove one to left and was robbed of a hit by Arseneau who picked the ball off his shoe strings. The Gyros were never dangerous again.

QUIET YOUTH PROVES VICT

Discussion as to Relative Merits Sprinters Indicates That Williams Leads

(Toronto Globe)

Arguments about Percy W liams' supremacy grow apace, p ticularly in the United Sta where the opinion prevails victories scored by the Canad flash must not be taken serio For years United States spri practically dominated the sh tion at the Olympic Games. season, with stars like Frank W koff and Charlie Paddock in tion, the United States looked ward to other triumphs, but slim, quiet youth from Vanco outclassed them all. He strictly on his merits. He ca it all over again. He is world's fastest human. Un States officials, who profess to lieve that George Simpson, Ed Tolan and Frank Wyckoff established records better any ever claimed for the Canad star, cannot understand why liams wins in slower time. liams has shown that these ords don't mean anything. Ge Simpson has a 100-yard mar 9 2-5 seconds under considera by the officials, and he may credited with this record, de the fact that starting blocks were used. Under the circumstan Simpson's claims are not in cordance with the standard sportsmanship desired in amat events. Grantland Rice, know one of the fairest and greatest sports writers, writes as fo regarding Simpson and Willi the champion:

"Whether or not Simpson c beat Williams or whether Willi could beat him, if both were f is a matter of opinion. Willi has put more upon the re books in the course of the last than any other sprinter. But liams and Simpson would have meet in more than one race be the sprinting supremacy could officially awarded."

That last remark by Rice s one to suspect that he has slig slightly. This suggestion more than one race is require determine supremacy would the way for endless disputes. feated athletes could claim sprinting title, for instance, setting records when using ing blocks or other arti means of transportation. Ca dians are proud of the wonde strides being made by the athl of this new generation, but day that the champion sprint the world is dethroned they applaud the victor, even if grieve for Williams. We that there will be no alibis.

Man in the Moon

People begin playing golf for exercise and end by becoming golf maniacs.

Golfer (who has just gone one round in 112)—Well, how do you like my game?

Caddie—I suppose it's all right but I still prefer golf.

In the rough—"These links are terrible, caddy."

"This ain't the links, sir. You got off them a long time ago."

"John, is everything shut up for the night?"

"All but you, darling."

Down on the prairies they have been telling hot weather stories lately. Here, they should be serving cold slaw.

When'er you seek enjoyment
In a quiet cosy way
Just take the kids and spend a week
In camp across the bay.

No matter if the day is damp
Or if the wind should blow
To get enjoyment a la mode
Across the bay you go.

Vary your dinners with fish and eggs

by Mary Blake

Women often tell me that their greatest difficulty in meal planning is to get variety into the main dish. It is easy enough to build a dinner, once you have selected the meat, but it takes thought to get away from the obvious round of steaks and chops and roasts.

Why not now and then substitute fish or eggs? By combining either one with milk, you have a dish rich in food values—proteins, minerals and vitamins. There are any number of delectable ways in which these combinations may be made—omelets of all sorts, creamed eggs, souffles, creamed tuna, shrimp or lobster, scalloped oysters, salmon souffle.

You must have a dependable milk supply

In any cooking that calls for milk, I never take chances. I use nothing but Carnation Milk. I know that it is the purest of high grade milk from selected herds. I know that it is rich in cream—doubly so—for it is evaporated to double thickness. I know that I will always find it sweet and good, no matter how large the quantity I have on hand, for it is sterilized for safe-keeping.

I can count on Carnation always for notably delicious results—extra creaminess, velvety smoothness of texture, fragile delicacy of flavor. The best informed domestic scientists agree that it is not only better in results than ordinary bottled milk, but that it is particularly economical.

If you want to know what a great new field of cooking success awaits you in the use of Carnation Milk, send for free Cook Book. Address Carnation Milk Products Co., Limited, 134 Abbott Street, Vancouver, B.C.

Carnation Tuna Fish a la King

2 tbsp. butter, ½ green pepper shredded, 1 hard-cooked egg, ½ cup chopped mushrooms, 3 tbsp. flour, 1 cup Carnation Milk, 1 cup water, salt and pepper, 1½ cups tuna fish, ½ cup peas. Saute green pepper and mushrooms in butter until tender (about 10 minutes), keeping covered. Remove mushrooms and pepper and blend flour with butter; add Carnation diluted with water and cook until mixture is thickened, stirring constantly. Place flaked tuna fish, peas, egg, mushrooms and pepper in double boiler; add sauce; cook over hot water 10 minutes. Serve in patty shells or on toast points. Serves 6. Lobster or shrimp may be used in place of tuna.

Baked Eggs a la Carnation

1½ tbsp. butter, 1½ tbsp. flour, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, ½ cup Carnation Milk, ½ cup water, 4 to 6 eggs, buttered bread crumbs. Make white sauce of butter, flour, seasonings and Carnation diluted with water. Pour into shallow baking dish. Cover sauce with eggs, being careful not to break yolks. Sprinkle buttered bread crumbs over top and bake in moderately slow (325°F.) oven until eggs are firm. Garnish with parsley.

The Best of Milk

Carnation Milk is simply pure, sweet whole milk, evaporated to double creaminess. Nothing is added; nothing removed but about half the water. Try this dependable, convenient, economical milk.

France and Great Britain combined must pass through only three Pacific ports of Canada and that Stewart and Prince Rupert are even more strategically situated to progress during the next fifty years than is Vancouver, we must be extremely hopeful as to the outlook.

"Such companies as Canadian Pacific Railway and Power Corporation of Canada are fine allies for any communities to have. These organizations, with all their financial and industrial ramifications, are now directly interested in the development of northern British Columbia. It is only logical to expect that what they have done for other parts of Canada will be done for our north country in the west. They are working in a territory of unparalleled richness, much more promising, for instance, than the new country being opened in northern Manitoba, northern Ontario and northern Quebec, for the north in the three farthest west provinces has more varied resources and can support a larger population in more diversified activities.

Sees Great Future

"Western Canada will need all the Pacific coast port accomodation it can develop. I believe that the next ten years will see Prince Rupert and Stewart, in general with their great hinterland, making greater progress than in all their previous years of existence. Good, effective publicity in the rest of North America is what northern British Columbia needs most."

Mr. Mitchell will spend the remainder of the week in and around Stewart, gathering material for a special number of his paper featuring resources of that district.

REMO FARMERS BERRY SOCIAL

REMO, July 30.—The Remo Farmers' Association's strawberry social and dance was very successful and in spite of the rain was well attended, a number of people coming from Terrace and other places. Mr. McLaren's orchestra supplied the music until the early hours of the morning. Covers were laid for 56 guests at the social.

Mrs. Fagan and Miss Wilkinson had charge of the children's entertainment and did splendid work with games and sports in the afternoon and a fancy dress carnival in the early evening, Messrs. Kenny, Couture and McLaren being the judges, and the prizes were won by Doris Atkinson among the big girls and Ruby Franks among the small girls and Billy Atkinson among the boys.

LIQUOR EXPORT IS DISCUSSED

(Winnipeg Free Press)

In two important respects the situation in regard to granting clearances on liquor exports to the United States has changed, as far as the government is concerned, since the prorogation of parliament. During a discussion in the house, Hon. Mr. Euler, minister of national revenue, expressed doubt about the strength of public opinion in favor of discontinuing the issuance of clearances. Since then, he has had increasing evidence from all parts of the country of disapproval of the government's policy of authorizing the export of liquor to the United States. At the present time, hundreds of letters and telegrams are arriving daily at Ottawa urging the government to stop the practice. Among those who are of this opinion are many friends of the government, and newspapers like the Toronto Star, the Ottawa Citizen and others, that are generally in sympathy with it. Mr. Euler and Premier King can hardly have any doubt now of the strength of opinion in the country on this question.
