DALLY EDITION

Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1914

The time is hardly opportune to agitate for the commencement of the long promised road around the island. There does not seem to be the prospect of an election within the next few months, and what's the use of spending good money now when it can be used to better advantage a the map. little later in buying votes?

Seriously, however, what is the matter with William Manson and his government? Why is it that this important work has been delayed? Is there not room enough to corrupt the workingmen of Prince Rupert without setting aside such an important work as this new highway? The cry of course is that the

G. T. P. will not come through with an equal share. Well, what if they do not? Was not this road promised to use by the premier as a direct gift from the government and without any insinuation that the G. T. P. would be held up to pay a share of the premier's gift?

Railway corporations are never looked upon as philanthropists. The men at the head of these concerns are hard-headed business men who are well paid to keep down expense at any cost. Consequently they invariably get the best end of the deal and it is foolish for the McBride government to expect that this this company will give them the last item of their demand. Of course if it were the C. N.

R. the government would probably be paying them a handsome sum even for the right however, offered to put up a fair share of the cost of this had one shred of sincerity in them they would either proceed with this construction or pull their plans entirely off,

Toronto Girls are Careful

Two reckless young men of 18 for under with Varsity pompadours had eaten maccaroons for fifteen minutes just to keep on staying. They looked at two giggly young things in black curly hats who sat at the next table land reasoned thusly: If they didn't want to dance why did they come in. They did want to dance only none asked them. Q. E. D. said Bobby in the velvet tie. He rose with a veni, vidi, vici air, crossed over and asked Mamie in la casual, if shaky voice, if she would care to dance.

Mamies face lost every particle of human expression as her teeth chopped out :"I don't dawnce, thanks." Bobbie's face was singeing his hair, but he died bravely by asking Florrie the same The Plum Coulee bandit, who is  question, more causally still. Be-
