WOMAN'S GRAPHIC STORY OF FEMALE HELP IN CANNERY

WHITE WOMEN WENT TO WORK IN STEVESTON CANNERY TO GET EXPERIENCE—DESCRIBES THE FILTH AND HARDSHIPS BEFORE LABOR COMMISSION

At the recent Labor convention in New Westminster a woman addressed the gathering, giving a graphic description of female work in a salmon cannery. She went to work in a Steveston cannery to investigate conditions. The speaker told the delegates how, when she arrived there, she found that she was expected to 'pack her blankets' and become 'a blanket stiff,' while the sleeping accommodations consisted of some dirty mattresses assembled in a bunkhouse which was totally devoid of door fasteners, and which salubrious apartment was occupied by nine or ten women of various ages and conditions. The hours of labor the delegate designated as being 'as long as there was any fish to can,' explaining that one day when fish were scarce, the help was laid off, but when they were plentiful, sixteen or eighteen hours was the general extent of a day's work. The reason for the change made by the cannery owners from Chinese to white women, she said, was, according to a statement from the owners, that the Chinese labor was supplied on the padrone system, one head man finding all necessary labor, and it was not so easy for the employer to handle his employees under that system as in the case of white women. This, said the speaker, showed that the white woman was used by the employers to fight the strength of the Chinese labor, and also that the employers considered the white woman as lower than a Chinaman. Continuing her speech, the delegate remarked that during her three weeks' employment there she frequently saw white men bringing in drink to the women in the bunkhouse, and while some of the women were of mature age, several were young, and such experiences as these were calculated to demoralize these young girls. The whole town got drunk on Saturday and stayed full till Monday. The description of the conditions at the cannery employing this woman are somewhat highly colored, although the buildings in which the help live and the grounds surrounding them are counsel mentioned his aged parents whom he might never see again if given the maximum sentence. 'By your actions,' said Magistrate Macdonald, 'you have brought discredit on the whole force with which you were connected. You have disgraced the uniform you wore and violated the oath you took. You perjured yourself before the police commission and before the royal commission investigating this affair. You aided in turning loose upon society a most dangerous criminal and you deliberately furnished him with a deadly automatic revolver, knowing his desperate character and that the chances were that those most likely to fall victims to it were your fellow members of the force. I will not say you had murder in your heart when you did this, but I will say that you were absolutely reckless of the consequences.' The magistrate intimated that he would have imposed a longer term had it been in his power.

Coughing scatters germs—Stop it. Coughing increases the irritation of the already inflamed mucous membranes and is moreover apt to carry disease to others. Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil promptly stops coughing, and soon, thanks to its tonic properties, effects a permanent cure. The wonderful popularity of Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil is specially due to its great value as a permanent lung and bronchial healer. Sold everywhere, 35c large bottles. J. L. LASHES POLICE TRAITOR WITH BITTER WORDS

Sir Hugh Macdonald Gave Considerable Maximum Penalty Winnipeg, Feb. 4.—'I consider your offence exactly on a par with that of a sentry who deserts his post in the face of the enemy,' said Sir Hugh John Macdonald, police magistrate, in sentencing to the maximum penalty of seven years in the penitentiary, Robert J. Reid, who as city police constable and a guard of Jack Krafchenko, accused of murder and bank robbery, assisted Krafchenko to escape. Reid stood at attention and said not a word during the proceedings, showing no emotion on his countenance except when his
