CHLORINATION IN CHAMBER

Chlorination got into even the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce last night when that body, at the instigation of Joe Scott, recorded itself as favoring such treatment of the city's water supply, suggesting that the city council should reverse its decision of last week against chlorination.

Ald. Robert McKay, who blamed the Daily News for his anti-chlorination stand, said he would reverse that stand and urge the council to vote for chlorination at its next meeting.

One point raised at the Chamber was the necessity of water being approved before foreign-going ocean vessels could take it. There was some doubt, however, as to whether th ere was any such necessity.

ROTARY STAGING FLOOD AID SHOW

Not content with their $50 club grant and the canvassing of members to be as generous as possible in their individual subscriptions, the Prince Rupert Rotary Club has launched another effort in support of the British Columbia Flood Emergency Relief Campaign. With Norton Youngs heading the committee in charge, the club is now marshalling the most popular talent in the city to take part in a grand variety show, staged in the old vaudeville manner, to be held next Sunday night in the Capitol Theatre which Manager Harry Black has made available without charge.

Bands, orchestras, vocal and instrumental solosists and ensembles will be presented and the town is also being scouted for other talent.

Stores Not Staying Open For Tourists

Prince Rupert Retail Merchants' Association has decided against stores remaining open beyond regular hours in order to accommodate tourists the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce was informed last night. Such was t he Association's answer to a suggestion emanating from the Chamber's meeting a month ago. For some time there has been agitation in certain quarters suggesting the possibility of such opening of stores.

Complaint About Weather Reports

Dissatisfaction over "inaccuracy" of the official daily weather synopsis and forecasts was expressed at the meeting of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce last night. "We remember that the Air Force was able to have reliable reports during the war and I don't see why we can't have them now," remarked President R. G. Large who, with other members of the Chamber, concurred in complaints that were made by Joe Scott. It was agreed that it would be of interest if members of the Chamber would keep individual weather records for comparison with the official ones.

Longshoremen Vote $50 Flood Relief

The local Longshoremen's Union has subscribed the sum of $50 to the British Columbia Flood Emergency Fund. The Union's check was received at the Daily News office yesterday for transmission to the central collecting agency.
