DAILY EDITION

Tuesday, May 5, 1914

The Sunday issue of the morning paper contains a report that one of the New Hazelton bank robbers is likely to die as the result of the frightful wound which he received the morning of the bank robbery. This is the same man who in an unconscious state was arrested, according to the same paper, singlehanded and with consummate courage by a provincial policeman.

Partisan newspapers can be of great service both to their own party and to the public generally by timely suggestion and criticism regarding party acts that are indefensible. Those newspapers which excuse every act of their party, however ill advised, render a very doubtful party service, while they seriously injure the cause of good government.

From the time that this city was compelled to buy all the old junk remaining after the fire at the Seal Cove sawmill, it has got nothing but the worst of it from the McBride administration. Indeed, the nefarious designs of the Mc-Bride administration began long before the city was compelled to buy this junk from Bowser's friends, Wilson et al.

None of the water powers or water supplies were reserved for the city, yet the govern-last year were in control of affairs today things would b moving along differently. flotation of city debentures would have been made which would have provided the city with new money to the amount of approximately a million and a half dollars. This would mean that necessary public works would now be under construction, while the working men and business men of the city would receive the benefit of the expenditures which would be particularly beneficial at this time pending the establishment of a through service on the Grand Trunk. As it is now, things are moving along in a hand to mouth fashion, with a dib here and a dab there, instead of on a well rounded and carefully thought out plan.

Pie-eating Contest

(Smithers Tribune)

A pie-eating contest was one of the most amusing incidents of the whole evening. Five nice. juicy blueberry pies were laid out for as many contestants, each of whom were to consume their pie without the aid of their hands. Two of the contestants, Messrs. Noel and Hetherington, had specially prepared themselves for this event, but lost out owing to continual skidding when their glossy pates came into contact with a soft spot. Mr. O'Neill won the contest by the length of two eyebrows.
