COST OF DISCOVERING AMERICA

Madrid, July 27.—[illegible] recently discovered in Palos, Spain, [illegible] interesting facts concerning the outfits made by Christopher Columbus on his expedition to the New World. The armament of the little fleet cost [illegible] pesetas. The personal expenses of Columbus on the [illegible] [illegible] were about 2,000 pesetas, and [illegible] pesetas a month sufficed [illegible] of the crew, so that 22,000 pesetas, or about $4,400, were spent for the expedition that the voyage lasted. The sum paid whereby America was discovered was 70,000 pesetas, or about $14,000.

—THERE ARE NO "DEAD ONES" HERE—

MERELY MABEL REMARKS

That the swiftening sun minus the burning breeze must have caused the poor Mayor quite a lot of "discomfiture."

That strange as it may seem, if the Mayor had said "discomfortableness" he would have at least been using a word which was quite English.

That the Borden government seems to be acting its way around Port Simpson.

That a tax rate of twenty and a half mills will be a fine thing for some future mayor to reduce.

That the council chamber tonight should be fragrant with attar of roses.

That the park commission zoo is now open for visitors between sunrise and sunset.

That children are requested not to annoy the animal with peanuts as it has a sore throat.

WHO WILL BE VANCOUVER ARCHBISHOP

The vacancy occasioned by the transfer of Archbishop McNeil from Vancouver to Toronto is causing speculation as to who will succeed him. Bishop Macdonald of Victoria is one name mentioned, in which event an easterner would probably be chosen to fill the bishop's place. Archbishops are selected by the bishops of the diocese, who send three names to Rome with the qualifications of each stated. Independent enquiries are made from the Vatican and the appointment follows usually, though not always, by one named by the bishops. The appointment is announced in the semi-official Vatican organ, and cabled from there to the parts of the world interested by the newspaper correspondents.
