Labor Day Thoughts By Bishop Du Vernet.

A public holiday in honor of labor should lead all to think of the importance of labor. The goal to be kept before all engaged in industry is not the amassing of private fortunes, but the supplying of human needs. Production is primarily for use and only secondarily for profit. Industry must be organized on a democratic basis. There must be rule and authority but this must be founded upon the consent of all for the benefit of all. The autocracy of the wealthy few must give place to the democracy of the mixed many, where the investors of capital and the investors of labor in the same industry stand upon an equal footing conferring together and working together for their mutual welfare, as well as for the good of the public who use the articles produced.

All over this vast Dominion there are natural resources waiting to be developed by the joint effort of capital and labor, and it is capital which has to take the first move and think and plan ahead. In many parts of this Dominion there are essential industries languishing for lack of capital. Undoubtedly the possessors of private capital have an important social function to perform, but if they forget this function and use the power of wealth to tyrannize over the producers of wealth, the spirit of democracy will at least demonstrate the fact that while capital in some form or other, either public, co-operative or private, is necessary to production the selfish private capitalist is not. He may be eliminated without loss to society. If he would be saved he must get the social vision.

It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man, who lives only for private gain, to enter the democracy of God.

It is the function of religion to keep the social ideal before all classes in the community. The tyranny of the working class, if unchecked, will destroy true democracy, just as much as the despotism of the rich. The domineering capitalist with no thought beyond getting the most out of his sweating brother for the least possible return cannot know what true religion is, for "he who loves not his brother whom he has seen cannot love God whom he has not seen."

The domineering workman with no thought beyond securing for himself everything which he can take by force, even though it means spilling the blood of his richer brother, cannot know what true religion is, but needs to learn that if he succeeded in securing the whole world for himself he would be socially poorer for he would have lost his true life—the life of service for others. "A man's life consists not in the abundance of the things which he possesses."

Money is the medium through which we exchange commodities. Brotherly love is the medium through which we exchange good will, kindly feeling, and helpful service.

To exercise this practical love in the industrial life is to be truly religious for "he who loves is born of God."

F. H. DU VERNET.

Narrow Escape From Local Strike.

Very few people in Prince Rupert have realized how near we have been to another strike. This time it was an international strike that threatened. A dispatch yesterday showed that the intention was to tie up all the railroads of the country unless the price of food was brought down. As a result the president of the United States is making an effort to bring pressure to bear on the food situation and so far that pressure is shown to be effective. Whether it will remain so will be seen later.

The curious thing is that the head of a big government can under pressure influence a situation which has been declared by everyone impossible of solution. If the president of the United States can do it, why cannot the premier of Canada do it similarly. Had action been taken before, many of the industrial troubles would have been obviated. It seems as if just now the power of recall would be a good thing for the people of Canada to have. Were there a threat to recall the Canadian Government if they did not keep down the prices, it is possible that they too would have seen a way as President Wilson has done when under pressure.
