THE KING'S CHARGER (Timely Cartoon by Jas S. Frise)

A TRIP UP THE NAAS RIVER

A holiday trip up the Naas River is one of the most pleasant ways of spending a summer vacation. There is a continuous panorama of the finest river scenery to be seen anywhere in British Columbia from the mouth of the river for seventy-five miles. C. W. Brown, and his native crew mosphere is a wonderful cure for the "nerves." There is not a dull or uninteresting mile in the whole distance. From Prince Rupert and return can be made in a week or the holiday can be extended to two weeks or as much longer as one can afford to prolong it and the fare for the round trip is less than $25. This is an excursion that every businessman in Prince Rupert ought to take as the Naas Valley is sure to become one of the greatest feeders of your city and lies almost at your front door. It is very rich in agricultural possibilities and contains many thousands of acres of fertile land with a navigable river running through the midst of it, assuring a cheap means of transportation. The soil and climate combine to produce vegetation most luxuriantly. Boat loads of all kinds of vegetables and roots; many kinds of berries and bush fruits; apples, plums and cherries; fresh eggs and poultry, rich milk and cream; fresh butter and cheese; beef, pork and mutton; will be distributed among your merchants, and the hundreds of settlers that will supply this produce for you will take in exchange from your business men thousands of tons of groceries and provisions, dry goods and clothing, boots and shoes, farm tools and machinery, fencing, hardware and building materials, household furnishings, books and stationery, drugs and sundries, in fact everything useful and ornamental that our advanced civilization can supply to a prosperous, cultured and ambitious people.

How to make the trip is easy. There are no complications in the itinerary. The "Prince John," the "Princess May," the "Venture," will carry you in style and comfort from Prince Rupert to Port Nelson on Naas Bay, and the mail boat will take you from there seventy-five miles up the river to the end of navigation into the very heart of the settlement.

The mail boat, the "Ella," is a gasoline launch, forty feet over all and ten feet beam, with a double tunnel stern. A safe and sturdy little craft, captained by C. W. Brown, and his native crew are all experienced river men who know every bend and current, twist and turn in the river. The deck is covered in for the protection of supplies and a comfortable three-quarter length cabin is at your service. A slave for making tea and cooking meals and a table to spread out the contents of the lunch basket are provided large enough for the use of a small party. The trip up can be made in ten hours actual running time, but stops are made at different points of interest. The current is swift in places and in running through the canyon there is just enough spice of danger to keep your wits from going wool gathering.

Besides the general beauty of the route, taking a bird's eye view of it, there are many objects of especial interest. The operations on the canneries at the mouth of the river where the king of fish, the sockeye salmon, are being handled by the thousands every day, are most interesting. The Indian villages and fishing stations on the river excite the curiosity. There are still some of the old style native houses and these contrasted with the modern houses which most of the Indians now live in form a very interesting contrast. Some of the latter are to all outward appearance invested with a grandeur and a show of comfort and substantiality that is commendable. The Indian in his old home surroundings, is an entertaining character to study. At Gitlak-danika, now the oldest Indian village on the river, there stand towering upwards for 75 feet or more some of the finest totem poles on the coast, most grotesquely carved and very ancient. Some of these totem poles cost over a thousand dollars to erect. These relics of an old Indian custom are becoming scarce. They have not erected any for a number of years. Some of the old Indian chiefs have a wonderful collection of Indian curios, Indian doctor's regalia, chieftain blankets, amulets, crowns, whistles, potlack faces, armlets, anklets, leggings, drums, some of which have been in use at their potlack dances for hundreds of years. At the canyon at Gwinoha the effects of the extremes of heat and cold are visible. The mountains are capped with glacial ice and along the south bank of the river an ancient volcano has poured out a volume of liquid fire which when cooled covered an area of probably 25,000 acres in extent and many feet deep. If this lava bed could be covered with alluvium annually carried down the river it would make a thousand good farms, but as it is there is a barren waste. The purest water in the world gushes in places from underneath it. There are hot sulphur springs in the valley, which are easy of approach from the river. There waters are declared to be of great curative value for rheumatic and kindred complaints.

Aiyansh is the most important and largest of the villages on the river and has a more modern appearance than any of the rest. This is the place where most of the settlers at present congregate. The telegraph and post office are situated here and there is a very good hotel here where good accommodation is provided and first class meals can be obtained. This village has a large and fertile area surrounding it on all sides. About 5000 acres of the best of it, however, is confined within an Indian reserve and unless some terms can be made with the Indians, will not be very productive. There is, however, many thousand acres outside of the reserve, which to clear and put under cultivation will keep a large and industrious settlement out of mischief for some years and will be as good as anything on the reserve.

It would take the pen of a much more ready writer than I to tell of half the interesting things of the valley, but I will close with the invitation that you come and see.

HALIBUT CONCERNS INDICTED BY JURY

Prince Rupert Named as One of Their Chief Shipping Points

Seattle, July 22.—The long expected indictments based on the Sherman anti-trust law, charging illegal combinations in restraint of trade in the halibut industry, upon which a federal grand jury began investigation last May, have been returned before Judge Neterer against six concerns engaged in the halibut industry, together with five officers and employes of these concerns.

The indictment, which is nearly fifty pages long, recites in detail the rise of the several companies from what, it charges, were small beginnings to be the controlling factors in the halibut industry for the whole country.

The indictment in substance then alleges that these several concerns and the individuals indicted conspired to control and limit the supply and price of halibut taken from the waters of the North Pacific and North Atlantic oceans and the Bering Sea, shipped through the markets of Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, and Boston; to control the price paid independent dealers for their fish by making exorbitant and unreasonable bids against them; to control the price by refusing to bid against each other; to control the distribution of halibut through the markets by pretended competition against each other; to control prices by refraining from good faith competition in markets allotted by agreement among themselves, and to control markets and prices by intimidation and coercion of independent dealers.

After the indictments were received and ordered filed, the grand jury was granted a recess until October 13, with the reservation that if the jurors were wanted before that time they would be seasonably notified.

Women Foul Bandits

Bartlett Springs, Cal., July 22. Two masked men held up two stages on the Woodland-Bartlett Springs line at the summit of the Brin grade, on the boundary between Colusa and Lake counties, took $12.50 and escaped.

They overlooked $300, which five women in the first stage dropped to the floor of the tonneau before getting out into the road.

Lots of Red Fish

Ketchikan, July 22.—Cannery men report that the proportion of red fish this year is higher than ever before. The Ketchikan Cannery has more red fish up now than altogether last year and the Pure Food Cannery has practically twice as many as in 1913.
