SUBMARINE INCIDENT MAY CHANGE POLICY OF BRITISH NAVY

London, Sept. 26 .- There is no attempt to deny the seriousness. of the naval disaster of Tuesday. the 22nd. The German submarine torpedo section undoubtedly represents the most efficient arm of their service and it is an open secret that they depend largely on it for success in the naval war. Their submarines are known to be far more numerous than was officially admitted at the beginning of the war. Their fleet lying behind narrow entrances in mined waters rests in comparative safety, while our ships, necessarily lying in the open sea, guarding against a raid are inevitably exposed to a blow such |

Sir Percy Scott's June fore- 3 cast, ridiculed then, is being recalled:

"Submarines and aeroplanes have entirely revolutionized naval warfare. The submarine can deliver a deadly attack, even in broad daylight. If submarines find a ship, she is doomed. They give no quarter. They only wait until she sinks and then return home, without even knowing the number of human beings they have sent to the bottom of the Count Reventlow then declared that the German submarines were all ready for service and all successfully constructed for work on the high seas and that the German submarine arm was in every respect in a state of successful progress.

Probably this submarine attack may bring about a change in naval plans. Some experts today advocate our mining the German coast to prevent German ships from emerging. This would completely reverse our former policy, which invited the German ships out. Mining is apparently supported by The Times naval 1836 THE BANK OF 1914 expert, who says:

"If there is no other means to prevent the German submarines from operating in our waters, or in waters of which we must have control, would it not be well to mine their coast and close them in, and their fleet as well? Assuredly our seamen will take such a course with the utmost regret, for it is their great desire that they may have an opportunity of trying conclusions with the German foe."

A second possibility is that the larger vessels may be withdrawn into protected waters. This, however, would increase the possibility of a raid. A third possibility, which, it is understood, was favored by one school of naval experts, is to adopt an aggressive policy and rush the German protected water with submarines and torpedo craft and strike a drastic blow at the fleets there.

MUST MARCH INTO SHADOW OF DEATH Prince Rupert Dairy

Incidents Like Cruiser Disaster Must Not Depress, Says Lord Rosebery.

London, Sept. 26 .- "This is lamentable enough," said Lord An invitation is cordially ex- Rosebery, when he learned of the tended to the citizens interested loss of three British cruisers. to inspect the dairy premises "Brave ships, gallant crews, all during the hours of 3:30 and 4:30 gone from us. But these are only Wednesdays and Saturdays when incidents in a war like this, where milking operations are being con- we must march into the very shadow of death. They must not depress us. We must expect them. We must press forward to our goal without a moment's hesitat. ing in purpose and bring it to a triumphant issue.' ' This well expresses the general British feeling. The three cruisers were of small amount. They were fourteen years old and obsolescent, though not obsolete. In a fleet of 700 ships they will readily be replaced, but the loss of the officers and men, who were of Britain's best in courage, skill and endurance, is the hardest to bear. This disaster and the relentless, bloody struggle for mastery on the Aisne will yield one good result. Like the heavy British losses at the battles of Mons, Charleroi and Namur and the subsequent retreat, it is certain to swell the stream of recruits into flood. Always when the war looks the toughest job, Britons comeforward most readily to ensure a final victory.

The officers reported missing under date of September 17 include one Kingston College graduate, Lieut. E. J. W. Spread, of the Royal North Lancashire Regiment. The officers of H. M. S. Hogue, which was sunk by a German torpedo, include Lieut .- Com. Clive Phillips-Wooley. It is not vet known whether he is among the rescued.
