ENEMY AGAIN FORCED TO RETIRE FROM POLAND WITH GREAT LOSS--RUSSIANS ADVANCING INTO GERMAN TERRITORY WITH GREAT RAPIDITY

(Special to The Daily News.)

London, Nov. 27.—In the new German retreat from Poland the invaders lost one fourth of their effective forces. The communications between the Austrian and German armies is declared definitely to be broken off. The Russians are marching on Breslau, Posen and Thorn with great rapidity.

Petrograd, Nov. 27.—The Austro-German defeat is assuming colossal proportions and will undoubtedly prove decisive.

RUSSIANS SCATTER TURKISH TROOPS

(Special to The Daily News.)

Petrograd, Nov. 27.—Official reports from the direction of Erzerum the Russian army has exterminated the Turkish forces. In the past days a series of engagements have taken place south of the city of Alaschert, where we have secured considerable Turkish forces who were reinforced by regular troops. In other sections no important changes have taken place.

KING WINTER AIDS LITTLE SERBIAN ARMY

(Special to The Daily News.)

London, Nov. 27.—News from Serbia is optimistic. The Austrians did not follow up their successes at Valje. This fact was due largely to weather conditions there. There was a heavy snow-fall between Nish and Uskub. This wintry weather will aid the Serbians. The morale of the army is excellent.

"BABY" OF REGIMENT LEADS BAYONET CHARGE

The story of a boy leading a bayonet charge is told by Corporal Isherwood, 2nd Manchester, one of 150 wounded who arrived at Cardiff early yesterday morning. He said: "On October 20 the Germans were all around us, and their fire enfiladed our trenches. First our lieutenant was wounded, then the sergeant, and we were left without a single officer to command a platoon. We were wondering what to do, when a private, a boy of eighteen, the baby of the company, threw up his cap and, with a ringing cheer yelled, 'Fix bayonets, lads.' We did, and charged the advancing Germans. The boy was in the act of bayonetting a German, when the latter shouted, 'For God's sake, don't stick me!' 'It is too late,' replied the youngster, 'it is through you.'"

NEW PAPER APPEARS.

The Prince George Post, an independent weekly paper, made its first appearance on November 24. This is a newsy sheet of ten pages and has the earmarks of prosperity. There are two other papers in this district, the Herald, at South Fort George, and the Tribune, at Central Fort George (so called). They are pretty nearly as well supplied in that line as Prince Rupert.

GERMAN TACTICS CEASELESS ATTACK

It is evident that the German military commanders are working upon the principle that "attack is the safest means of defence." Judging from the fact that so many fresh battalions are being rushed to the front against the French, Belgians and British in Flanders and against the Russians in Poland and East Prussia, it is apparent that the enemy's endeavor is to keep the fighting outside of their own frontiers. They are following out the plan outlined in General von der Goltz' book, "The Nation in Arms," written some years ago in which he said, "It is our endeavor that Germany shall never again be the arena of war, but that it shall fight out all its quarrels outside its own frontiers."

Carrying this plan out to its logical conclusion the war should be over in a comparatively few months, as the allies are calmly letting the Germans play themselves out in vain efforts to possess the channel ports. It seems clear that Generals Joffre and French have the measure of their enemy and the complete breakdown of their attacks should be only a matter of weeks.

NAVAL POLICY FOR NEXT PARLIAMENT

(Special to The Daily News.)
Ottawa, Nov. 27.—The Evening Journal states that the Government is preparing a drastic naval programme which they will submit to Parliament at the coming session. What the proposals are it is impossible to ascertain but those who know Mr. Hazen are aware that he has given most earnest study to the question and undoubtedly will propound a policy which will both be in the interests of Canada and the Empire.

A STAB IN THE BACK.

Private John Robertson, of the 1st Battalion Black Watch, whose parents reside at 23 St. John St., Stirling, has written home from a Liverpool military hospital. While he holds to the view that the Germans are no good with the rifle, he remarks that the enemy's artillery is the best in the world of its kind. "The Germans are awfully frightened for the cold steel, however," the writer goes on to say, "and when they get a stab it is almost always in the back for they invariably run away from our boys."

"If a Briton were to meet ten Germans and to draw his bayonet and rattle it on the top of his rifle, they would all scamper off. They might turn and fire at him, but he would need to be 16 feet in height instead of 5 1-2 feet or 6 feet before they could hit him." However terrible and strenuous the fighting may have been, it does not seem to have affected the writer's spirit, for he talks of "getting a new rig-out" in order that he may go back to fight for King, country and revenge. He underlines the last word.

BRITISH WARSHIP BULWARK BLOWN UP BY HER OWN SHELL

ACCIDENT TOOK PLACE IN SHEERNESS HARBOR—ALL BUT 12 OUT OF 781 MEN WERE KILLED IN THE EXPLOSION.

(Special to The Daily News.)

London, Oct. 27.—H.M.S. Bulwark, a battleship of 15,000 tons, was blown up in Sheerness harbor yesterday. The explosion was caused by one of her own shells bursting. All on board except twelve were lost.

The Bulwark was a battleship of 15,000 tons displacement and a speed of 18 knots per hour. She was completed in 1895. She carried the following guns: 4 12-inch; 12 6-inch; 18 12-pounders and 4 3-pounders. She was built at a cost of $4,889,230. She carried 781 men. While not a first-class battleship her loss will be severely felt.

SONG OF DEATH.

British Artillery's Deadly Work.

A vivid description of the German slaughter on the Yser is contributed to the Dutch newspaper Tyd by a correspondent at Ostend.

In the mad rush from the battlefield, he says, dead and wounded were crushed under the wheels of the retreating artillery. There were none to bury the dead or succor the wounded, and the prostrate bodies were used as bridges for the living to pass over in their retreat.

The wounded men trying to crawl to the blood-stained dykes for water were left to die or were thrown hastily into waggons like sacks of sand.

Standing on a high dune commanding the battle, the correspondent saw the English artillery sending a storm of shrapnel in one unbroken stream—a shuddering song of death. The shells fell unerringly among the mass of Germans, very few surviving to reach the trenches, where they were mown down by the deadly and cool rifle fire.

All the line of infantry was hidden, and the Germans were killed by a foe they never saw. In small detachments they fled before the terrible unseen death.

But more German troops were sent out to this certain death. Singing and cheering almost in delirium the grey-coated soldiers stormed the invisible trenches (Excision by the censor.)

One thousand yards—500 yards—not a shot, but at 300 yards a long flame of fire and the Germans did not exist. It was horrible, but it was war. (Excision by censor.)

In Ostend the German headquarters were ordering up more men to the attack, while the streets were crowded with the wounded and dying. Some struggled to cafes and sank bleeding on to chairs while their comrades drank and shouted.

MYSTICISM OF THE MADHOUSE

It is idle to remind us that Nietzsche touched life at other points, and that in his flaming incoherence you will find contradictions of this vision. For it was this vision of Attila, and no other, that conquered the imagination of Prussia. She desired all Europe for an empire, and after that the seas, and at last the world. It needed but one further step in this mysticism of the madhouse to decree divine honors to the Kaiser.

Now let Nietzsche speak for himself. Thus spake Zarathustra on the morality of war:—

"You shall love peace as a means to new wars, and a short peace better than a long."

"I do not counsel you labor, I do not counsel you peace, but victory. Let your labor be a conflict, and your peace a victory."

"It was said of old that a good cause sanctifies war; but I say to you that a good war sanctifies my cause."

As to what he meant by a "good" war he leaves us in no doubt. He meant simply a war in which a victorious Prussia would slay and burn without measure and without pity.

"My brothers, I place above you this new Table of the Law: Be hard!"—Prof. Kettle, in T.P.'s Journal of Great Deeds of the Great War.
